A New Line
Richberg-Borah, Nice Fight
Don't Forget Busy NRA
In Germany, What?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HERE'S a line, from Washington, that you never read in any newspaper before:

"The government's Home Owners' Loan Corporation has lent more than ONE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS of public money, to protect citizens from loss of their homes by mortgage foreclosure."

President Roosevelt is sailing the seas on a United States man-of-war, catching "big barracuda" and getting the rest he needs.

At home, Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the new industrial emergency committee and a sort of "President ad interim," is fighting it out with Senator William E. Borah from Idaho. The latter is one of the only remaining advocates of the theory that an ordinary American citizen is something more than a pawn in the game of politics.

Opposition is useful, always welcome, to real fighters. The President, Mr. Richberg and General Johnson will be grateful to Senator Borah for at last "saying something."

The senator said "something," and he said plenty. He accuses the Roosevelt administration of "stealing away man's rights in the name of public interest, and taxing him to death in the name of recovery." He says:

"Those bureaus of the new bureaucracy are innumerable. The expense is intolerable. Their power is dangerous and threatening."

Mr. Richberg calls attacks on the new era "pitiful and partisan." There is no such thing as a dictator ruling in America, says Mr. Richberg, and to comfort the prosperous, who pay the bills, he assures them that the new deal checks, frightens, terrifies and holds in awe the "reds" and "anarchy."

Taxpayers reply that if, with their money, you put everybody on the payroll, "reds" and "anarchy" must keep quiet for a while, because they will be busy drinking beer with the "easy money." The question, according to these worried, tax-paying prosperous ones is: "How long can you keep paying out the billions? And what will happen, what will 'Reds' and 'Anarchists' do when the beer money suddenly stops?"

General Johnson makes it clear that NRA will not be moved to right or left, up or down, by attacks from Senator Borah, or praise from Mr. Richberg. Yesterday NRA ordered L. Grief & Sons, Inc., operating eight clothing mills, employing four thousand workers, to pay their employes between $100,000 and $200,000 back pay as "restitution" for under payment. If they don't pay this money within two weeks, they will lose the Blue Eagle, and the Attorney-General will be asked to prosecute them.

NRA means to compel gentlemen in business to compete in efficiency, rather than in low wages. To allow one concern to underpay would be unfair to others compelled to obey NRA rules.

European news is doubly complicated by the fact that

VATICAN CALLS WORLD TO DEFEAT HITLER

Copyright, 1934, by International News Service

Berlin, July 7—Despite a government statement that executions ended a week ago, International News Service learned today from an authoritative source that killings continued all week, at least until last night. Today the government finally resolved to issue a death list—of forty-six names—which will be made public Monday. Government circles, however, admit privately that at least 170 persons were killed in the "purging" process and that 200 would be a reasonable estimate.

Vatican City, July 7—The Vatican took energetic action today in protesting against the reported murder of Father Emil Muhler by German Nazis, and against the denial of the last sacrament to other victims of the Hitler "counter-revolution" of a week ago.

The ecclesisastical authorities at Munich were instructed to deliver the protest to the Hitler government.

Cardinal Faulhaber at Munich is reported to be particularly incensed at the cynical explanation received from Nazi officials that Catholics, slain at Hitler's orders, were denied the sacrament "because the guilty party was unworthy."

"It is understood that the Vatican is collecting evidence of the execution of Catholics in Germany with the intention of issuing a white book for publication throughout the world.

Berlin, July 7—A call to all Christendom to unite in defense against Nazi terrorism has been issued by an unidentified spokesman for the Vatican, it was learned here today when copies of the Hungarian newspaper Pester Loyd were received. The paper contained an ex-

ARMOR DISCOVERED IN SEIZED AUTO

HALF MILLION IN LOOT

Loot in the Magnolia jewel robbery at the Hodgson-Kennard store, may reach as high as $500,000 or $550,000 in value, it was revealed here today.

According to Edgar W. Hodgson of the jewelry firm, the bandits' "take" was as follows:

114 diamond and other precious stone rings, valued at $74,000, wholesale prices;

36 bracelets, valued at $56,400, wholesale;

30 pendants, valued at $26,950, wholesale;

Memorandum goods, valued at $52,337.

All these jewels actually total, wholesale and past replacement price, at $278,753.50. But together with the four packages of materials delivered from New York on Thursday night, the grand total would reach $327,377.50. And this would be only cost prices.

With ordinary profit requirements, it is estimated that the value runs from $500,000 to $550,000.

In Boston's South End and the Italian section of Worcester, police swooped today in the hunt for five bandits who staged Magnolia's half-million dollar robbery yesterday.

The South End clue was carefully guarded by Sergeant Arthur Tiernan of the Boston detective bureau and Inspectors J. Henry Burgess and James R. Moody of the Gloucester police. They were known, however, to have visited three lodging houses.

In Worcester, police seized a sedan and three loaded revolvers in a Lyon street garage where they also found sheets of steel armor plate that is used by bandits in running gun fights.

Worcester police flashed word of the find to Boston and Gloucester, then set to work in the hope of obtaining fingerprints from the revolvers and machine.

The serial numbers of the sedan had been burned off. It carried no registration plates, but a set of Connecticut numbers were on the floor of the car.

The find was believed by police to be the first tangible clue, while all the forces of law in Massachusetts

BAKERY TRUCK KILLS TWO

North Billerica, July 7—An 18-year-old girl and her mother were killed here today, when a Boston bakery truck struck them while they waited for a bus at Boston road and Lowell street, near their home. The girl, Helen Paskiwitz, was pronounced dead when she was taken to St. John's Hospital, Lowell. Mrs. Julia Paskiwitz, 40, the mother, died half an hour later.

George R. Shubley, 20, of Arion street, Dorchester, driver of the truck for a concern in Albany street, Roxbury, said he fell asleep at the wheel after a long drive, according to police. He was held on a charge of manslaughter in connection with each death.

Shubley was pinned in the cab of the truck, which burst into flames when it overturned on its side. He was extricated by firemen, while passersby were taking the two victims to the hospital.

NEW YORK JEWEL RING LINKED IN MAGNOLIA GEM HOLDUP

3 BOSTON LODGING HOUSES SEARCHED FOR BANDITS

and New York were marshalled toward the solution of the most daring and successful robbery of its kind ever executed in this state.

New York investigators gave attention to the way four bundles of jewelry were shipped in plain packages from four separate jewelry houses in New York to the Hodgson-Kennard shop in Magnolia.

For all of their pains, the five bandits who crowned their efforts yesterday might well have "cleaned out" the Magnolia jewelry store any day since it opened on Monday.

But, authorities point out, they waited until the four New York consignments arrived to stage their coup.

Furthermore the arrival of four plain wrapped packages of precious jewels, by express, on Thursday night, was known ly to officials of the firm and some information must have been forthcoming from another source to enable the robbers to time their robbery when they did.

As police themselves said, this information may have come from those who handled the shipments en route from New York to Boston.

Shipment Records Traced in Gem Hunt

Authorities were loath to admit that suspicion pointed to anyone. But, as they said, "they weren't missing a bet."

"Frankly, it seems strange to us that the man described as leading the robbery was able to reach up to the shelves above the safe in the Hodgson-Kennard store and take these parcels."

That is what one investigator ad-itted, but he would say no more. He declared flatly that he hought the employes in Magnolia ere above suspicion.

He said that he did think that various sources. As they did not officially say, they were investi-ing specific sources.

nked with this set of clues was rmation received by police headquarters in Boston that a South End mob was implicated.

Two of Boston's best detective-inspectors were especially assigned to the hunt on the information received and the entire department was charged with responsibility of aiding them.

In further confirmation of their theory that the Magnolia jewel robbers could be trailed ultimately to New York, authorities pointed out that the Bay State's last major crime of that nature was solved in that city.

All Marks of rofessional Gang

For that robbery, Byron Jones, alias Byron Beaucaire, was arrested. A scrutiny of his record, associates, and connections, was being made by New York police today.

As far as records show, the robbery yesterday is the biggest crime of its sort ever perpetrated successfully in the United States.

Next to it in magnitude was the looting of Harry Glemby of New York, who, in January, 1932, was robbed of $310,000 in jewelry. At that time, the robbers also missed another $39,000 worth of precious materials stored in the Glemby mansion in East 67th street.

Gloucester authorities, who were being aided by state police in probing the Magnolia robbery, said that they did not suspect any North Shore resident of being a "Raffles" [illegible] "finger man" in the case. They [illegible] that they were convinced the entire affair was prepared and perpetrated by a strictly professional criminal gang.

The retail value of the gems looted rose from an estimated figure of $200,000 to $500,000 to $550,000.

Because all of the jewelry was insured, officials expected the arrival of Noel Scaffa, ace New York private detective, veteran investigator of a dozen headlined international jewel thefts and successful solvent in most of them.

Scaffa, who doesn't work along police lines, exactly, was due in Magnolia sometime during the morning, but no one really expected to know when he came or when he left.

His entry is as mysterious as his departure in any case, police pointed out, and the solutions to crimes have been equally marvelous.

Charles Orcutt, 48, manager of the Hodgson-Kennard store which was looted, was going over his story with investigators today, as were John Robert Hodgson, son of one of the firm, and other eyewitnesses and victims of the robbery.

Still in doubt was whether or not one of the five bandits had a real or a fake machine gun, but no doubt was expressed that the four pistols wielded the others were real.

Machine Gun Is rmed "Phony"

The "Tommie" machine gun, first reported in the hands of one of the bandits, was called a "phony" when

Closer check was also being made today as to the clothing that the bandits wore and whether or not all five had the smoked glasses first reported. The robbery was a masterpiece of timing and execution as far as the criminal viewpoint was concerned.

It isn't customary, even in summer-wealthy Magnolia, to neglect posting a police guard outside a place that stores such large amounts of jewelry as were stolen yesterday.

Ironically enough, burly, six-foot Coleman Flaherty, Gloucester police plainclothesman, who was due to get the guarding assignment on next Monday, drove through Lexington avenue yesterday very close to the time that the stickup was taking place.

Officer Missed Gang by Seconds in Holdup

Flaherty wasn't on a jewel-guarding job at that time, however. He was merely looking into a reported traffic jam along the arcade.

He reported that he didn't see a thing wrong on his ride by automobile, and authorities believe that Flaherty had only missed the grand climax by moments.

Opinion was divided when this was learned. Flaherty has earned a reputation for himself, and it was thought that he might have completely spoiled the bandits' plans by his appearance. He is reputedly dangerous enough to have messed up the bandits' game, even with four or five men against him.

On the other hand, it was thought that the bandits might have mowed the officer down just as two Needham patrolmen were mowed down when they stepped into the path of the bandits who were pillaging the bank there last February.

Flaherty was on his way back to Gloucester police headquarters to tell that all was well, when he met a cavalcade of police rushing toward Magnolia. They were responding to the alarm of the robbery.

This officer might have been reinforced by Clarence Wilkinson—but like all such cases, there are a lot of "mights."

Wilkinson, retired from the police force three weeks ago, was painting a house on Flume road, when he saw a car drive up Lexington avenue.

"Four or Five in Holdup Auto," Says Witness

He described the machine as a large sedan, bearing New York license plates. According to the best of Wilkinson's recollection the car stopped just outside the Orcutt home.

Wilkinson didn't recall just how many men there were in that car, but he said:

"There were at least four or five. I think that there were three in the back and two in front. I can't swear to it. One wore a sort of chauffeur's suit of blue."

Wilkinson, busy with his own painting job, said that he saw nothing suspicious about the party. He thought they were merely a group visiting.

To add to it all, a storekeeper, Alk Ina, who keeps an establishment almost diagonally across from the Orcutt place, also turned up with a story of seeing a chauffeur get out of a large car and walk up and down Flume road.

At another time, said Ina, he might have been curious, but at this particular time, chauffeurs were plentiful in the district and he really thought nothing of the situation until it was all over.

It was not learned definitely, but it was reported, that authorities had received valuable information from this man.

As far as could be determined today no one really observed the bandit gang enter the Orcutt house.

From witnesses and victims, inside the store, two men were described as entering first. Which of the gang they were no one remembered, but all agreed that they were garbed in such fashion as to pass the most critical sartorial eye.

Thrusts Automatic at Young Hodgson

The first man, according to police, wore a brown sport jacket and white flannel trousers. He turned to young Hodgson, then to Orcutt. Then he announced:

"This is a stickup. Don't start any trouble, and we won't."

This man was wielding an automatic pistol. His companion in arms, nattily-dressed also, produced the same sort of an ugly-looking gun.

Hodgson and Orcutt were backed into the silver room of the establishment.

This was the bandits' order and "Swing your faces to the wall." the prisoners obeyed. The hands and legs of both were taped up with three-inch strips, and across their mouths were slapped sealing slices of smaller tape.

Eighteen-year-old Edward Davis, Jr., the tall, gangling, observant youth who does the odd jobs about the place, stepped into the police picture at this time with a "machine gun" angle. Said he:

"I was up in the silver room, and the first thing that I heard was: 'Keep quiet. Keep the hands up'.

Boy Likens Leader to John Dillinger

"Another voice sounded behind me. This man said: 'Don't let him look at me. Make him keep his dukes up'."

Davis said that it was only a matter of a minute or two before he was pinioned from behind and his mouth and wrists taped up.

Here it was that young Davis explained that he had seen pictures of John Dillinger in the papers and that the man who faced him looked like the arch-bandit of the midwest. He insisted:

"That man in front of me had a machine gun. He stuck it in my ribs. I know what a machine gun look like. I have seen photographs of the one used in Needham. Oh, it was a machine gun all right, and the guy who held it looked just like Dillinger.

"His face was just like the pictures of Dillinger that I have seen in the newspapers."

Because the Dillinger clue wasn't much help to authorities, who would have been looking for Sou'west John anyhow, Davis' story was put down a bit, and attributed to the excitement of the moment.

Nonetheless, there was no particular scoffing among the officials, because the evanescent, effervescent John Dillinger might well have done the job. No one else knew his whereabouts yesterday. Or today, for that murder.

The bandits, either the first two with the pistols, or the second pair with pistol and "machine gun," went right to work, according to witnesses.

Said Charles Orcutt, 48-year-old manager of the shop:

"They seemed to know just what they wanted. They ignored the jewelry of lesser value. They paid no attention to windows filled with gold' articles. 'We don't want that' was the only thing they said—meaning the gold."

For all of the confusion as to who was holding what weapons, it was generally agreed that two men held guns and "taped up," while two others cleaned out.

Cleanup Gang Picked Packages for Loot

The two "clean-up" men seized four packages, wrapped in ordinary paper and stacked on a shelf above the big safe in the store, that would ordinarily have been ignored by a bandit gang.

None of these packages had previously been opened. They had only arrived from New York—via express—the night before.

None but the management of the store, the consignors, and intermediary employes, knew the contents, police said.

But all four packages were seized, without hesitation, by the chieftain bandit, it was agreed.

Loot in these four "mystery" consignments represented no less than $50,000.

Miss Jessie Goddard, a maid employed in the Orcutt home, stepped into the picture and was promptly bound and taped.

Mrs. Ann Orcutt the manager's wife, looking for the maid, also stepped into the picture. She was promptly seized, tied with part of the green silk drape on the bank grill gate, then gagged.

It was estimated that the entire procedure took but from 12 to 20 minutes.

INSPECTOR MOODY EDWARD DAVIS INSPECTOR BURGESS

Edward Davis, office boy for Hodgson-Kennard & Company of Magnolia, entered the store as the half million dollar gem robbery by five gunmen was under way and was promptly seized and bound with tape. A machine gun carried by one of the bandits was poked in his back. He said that he believed one of the men was "Dillinger" but this was doubted by the police. Davis, with Police Inspector J. Russell Moody and Inspector J. Henry Burgess, both of the Gloucester police, are shown examining the bandages with which Davis was bound.

JOHNSON PLANS TO SUPPLANT NRA SYSTEM

Codes to Be Retained for Self-Governing by Industry

Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press

New York, July 7—A plan to replace the NRA with self-government for industry, an authoritative source said today, is being formulated by President Roosevelt's administration.

Under the proposed plan, codes would become a permanent feature of industry, which would govern itself under the close supervision of the federal government.

JOHNSON'S TAKES LEAD

General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, has taken the lead in the reformation, The Associated Press informant disclosed.

Steps toward completion of the new project were initiated by Johnson several weks ago in a preliminary set-up submitted to President Roosevelt. Suggested revisions are being made for final approval by the President.

Washington observers say the plan follows closely the known beliefs of General Johnson that coordination of the NRA and the Federal Trade Commission is necessary.

LICENSING FAVORED

Special care has been taken by Johnson, it was said in New York, to avoid, under the new organization, the monopolistic tendencies charged against the NRA.

The Associated Press Informant said:

"The federal government would watch closely to prevent any rise in prices it deemed unjustified.

"If the Sherman anti-trust act continues under suspension, its provisions would probably be guarded by a licensing system to prevent such rises.

"As a measure of protection to the smaller business and industrial man, the federal government would keep a strict watch to prevent any monopolistic tendencies."

The plan, it is believed, also will call for some guarantee of the NRA collective bargaining powers before granting industry the right to govern itself.

CONFERENCE WITH SWOPE

Whether unemployment insurance would be included in the self-government program was not learned.

Sources close to General Johnson said he has drawn both upon his own experiences in industry and upon the ideas of others for the project.

It is believed he has consulted Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company, who has advanced a program for stabilization of industry under self-government by stabilizing employment and co-ordinating production.

Grove Improved at St. Elizabeth

Moses "Lefty" Grove, Red Sox southpaw, was still at St. Elizabeth hospital today, and may remain tomorrow. Grove, still suffering from infected tonsils, was said to be recovering rapidly.

DESCRIPTION OF BANDITS

No. 1—Five feet, six inches tall, 165 pounds, very swarthy, fat face, dark complexion. Brown sweater, white knickers.

No. 2—Five feet, 11 inches tall, 160 pounds, light complexion, good looking, slender build, wore brown gabardine pinch-back sport jacket, white sport trousers.

No. 3—Five feet, 11 inches tall, 165 pounds, sport clothes, good looking, carried the machine gun, and gave orders.

No 4—Five feet, seven inches tall, 170 pounds, round face, dark gray sport suit, carried the black suitcase in which the stolen jewelry was placed.

Beyond the light blue uniform worn by the chauffeur of the bandit machine, no witnesses could be found to offer any description of the fifth bandit.

DIVORCEE WEDS BUFFALO MAN

Mrs. Elizabeth Thorndike Duncan, former Boston society girl, has been wed in New York for the second time, it was learned today in despatches from that city.

Mrs. Duncan, who was married in a fashionable wedding at Newport, R. I., to John Patterson Duncan nine years ago, divorced him at Reno last April. A sealed agreement was reached over custody of two children but details were not announced.

Her new husband is George Edward Parkinson of Buffalo, N. Y.

The bride is the daughter of the late Alden A. Thorndike of Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, and the present Mrs. Walter Atherton. She is a former member of the Vincent Club and Junior Lague, and took part in many of their theatricals.

Her Reno divorce, last April, followed by exactly 16 days the second marriage of her mother, at New York, to Walter Atherton, Back Bay architect.

Call Customer Holdup Clue

On information furnished by the Boston police, authorities investigating the $500,000 Magnolia jewel robbery today sought for questioning a man who appeared at the Hodgson-Kennard store in Magnolia Tuesday, making a purchase and presenting a large bill, probably $100.

It was believed that the purchaser used the bill to observe the location of the safe in the store, since it was necessary for the salesman to change the money.

The informant could not be certain as to the amount of the money presented, but he said he noticed the "customer" watching the salesman as he made his way to the strong-box to change the bill.

2 HITCH-HIKERS KILLED NEAR NORWOOD

Four Bruised When Auto Plunges Into Tree

Two youths were killed and four others were injured on the new Providence-Boston highway, just outside of Norwood early today, when a car in which they had just thumbed a ride overturned after crashing into a tree.

The dead are:

Lawrence Flynn, 21, of Morton street, Stoughton.

John Harris, 21, of Pleasant street, Canton.

The victims, a few minutes before the fatality had been picked up on the highway and were being given a lift to Canton.

The dead youth's companions, received cuts and bruises about the face and body and were treated at Norwood Hospital. They gave their names as Charles Patrisisa, 17, Neponset avenue, Canton, and Guergino Barsellia, 16, of Ames street Canton.

According to the police, the car registered to Charles Radzevich, Mechanic street, Canton, had been borrowed early in the evening by Michael Bertoletti.

Abandoned Infant Found in Brighton

A year-old infant girl clad only in a night gown and a blue and white baby's blanket was found abandoned ina driveway on Litchfield street, Brighton, this morning by Patrolman Henry Brogan and John McGuire. The baby was brought to the Chardon Street Home.

JEWS FLEE NEW PERSECUTION

By Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, July 7—Jews of Eastern Thrace, fleeing from persecution allegedly from Turks, influenced by anti-Semitic propaganda from an undetermined source, are flocking to Istanbul in large numbers. The Turkish Minister of the Interior left today for Thrace to investigate, accompanied by Inspector General Tala Bey, of that region.

The Government is advising Jews to return home. Protection has been offered, and a warning has been issued that those guilty of persecution would be severely punished.

Thousands of refugees are arriving from the Dardanelles. Two trains from the Adrianople region arrived today, crowded with Jewish families.

Minneapolis May Have Big Strike

Minneapolis, Minn., July 7—Minneapolis' truck drivers have the support of the city's trade unions in their controversy with their employers. Deciding at a mass meeting last night to consider a general strike should the truck drivers walk out again, they gave added incentive to mediators who are seeking to prevent a repetition of last May's strike.

The union truck drivers charge that the owners have failed to keep the agreement which ended the May walkout and set 7 p. m. Wednesday as the "deadline" for compliance with their demands.

Looper Held in $5000

Charles B. Williams of Seaver street, Charlestown, alleged loop driver arrested in Somerville, after a chase in a stolen car with two other companions who escaped police, is under $5000 bail awaiting the grand jury.

Hundreds Volunteer for Infantile Paralysis War

By Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 7—Science's war against infantile paralysis has enrolled hundreds of volunteers as living "test tubes" for experiments with anti-paralysis serum.

Ready to sacrifice their lives if need be in the search for a cure for the disease, the volunteers have come from all parts of the country to Dr. John A. Kolmer, bacteriologist head of Temple University's medical staff, with offers to try out a vaccine he has produced. Dr. Kolmer said:

"Hundreds of persons have offered themselves, but no actual inoculation will be made until my paper describing the serum has been submitted to the American Medical Association.

"Then we will decide just which volunteers will be chosen to carry on the work."

The Temple immunologist's antitoxin, developed through years of research, has undergone a long series of successful tests with monkeys as subjects and now is ready for the final stage of experiment—human beings.

His experiments, disclosed a few months ago, were similar, Dr. Kolmer says, to those employed by Dr. William H. Parke, Dr. Josephine Neel and Dr. Henry Wirt, New York bacteriologists who this week inoculated themselves to test a serum they developed.

MAN BEATEN AT BACK BAY PARTY

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

The news that Katharine Hepburn isa to be starred in the late Miss Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" is one of the straws that show which way the wind is blowing. It looks as if the movie magnates are pretty well scared of the storm that is blowing up over the boycott, that presumably illegal device for bringing unpopular business men to terms. At date of writing most of the largest religious bodies have announced their approval of such procedure and many of the local bodies and smaller sectarian synods have fallen into line. When they actually get into action we shall probably see some very interesting results.

Robert E. Rogers

Of course such an announcement as that quoted above is not entirely the result of fear, although fear has played its part. After "Little Women" the movie magnates in their usual "follow-the-leader" manner began to hunt frantically about for old fashioned stories of which they personally had never heard and about the atmosphere and milieu of which they probably had only the haziest notions.

Their search for other filmable stories by Louisa May Alcott presumably failed, as we have heard little about her for some time. There was a little talk about "The Five Little Peppers" by Margaret Sidney Lothrop, who lived in Hawthorne's house in Concord. (By the way, I have often wondered whether the Pepper's "Little Brown House" of enchanted memory was not described from the Little Women brown house, which stands next door to Margaret Sidney's old home.) I do not know whether any progress was made towards making a picture out of that interminable saga which was so popular among adolescent girls (and even some boys) a century ago. But with a cast of some of those remarkable Hollywood children the story might prove a not bad investment.

But "Pride and Prejudice" is something else again. Miss Austen's story of English county life over a century ago, a life of genteel manners and social aspirations and well-bred inhibitions, is not to be managed in the middle-class sentimental humor of "Little Women." The theme is distinctly high comedy. The machinations of a foolish and ambitious mamma to marry off her daughters advantageously, and the long drawn-out duel between the high-spirited, witty, self-respecting Elizabeth Bennett and the spoiled and snobbish D'Arcy, the young gentleman of fortune and family is certainly not one to be treated in the spirit of romance or sentimentality. It should be brilliant in the brittle and mental manner.

So little does the romantic element count that when Jane Austen finally reaches her climax, the proposal scene between the haughty and condescending D'Arcy and the serene and superior Elizabeth, she polishes it off in about half a page of perfunctory narrative without even a single line of direct discourse. Either she had never participated in a love scene of any kind, and so was unsure of her ground, or else she was interested solely in the comedy and not at all in the romance. In either case someone is going to have to do a lot of tall creative writing if there is to be a love scene that any film addict will recognize.

The choice of Katharine Hepburn is characteristically imbecile. She is essential a modern, in figure and profile, in manner, temperament, and psychology. Her beauty would have been thought eccentric and grotesque in Elizabeth Bennett's day. The latter's breeding and decorum, her cool and penetrating intelligence, her womanly reserve, however bold she may have appeared in the Waterloo era, strike me as being a bit beyond Miss Hepburn's acting capabilities. Although, of course, Miss Hepburn attended Bryn Mawr—or was it Vassar? Possibly she might model her acting on that of one of the younger lady tutors and so get results.

But the trouble lies deeper. Ours is a new age with little sense of history and the past, unless the past is romanticized as in "Queen Christina," or made comic as in "Henry VIII" or sensationalized as in Cecil de Mille's Roman spectacles. We do not really understand the past or want to understand it. The modes and manners and ways of thinking which produced the gentle tales of half a century or a century ago are insipid to us. The movies did not produce these tastes in us. Our tastes produced the movies.

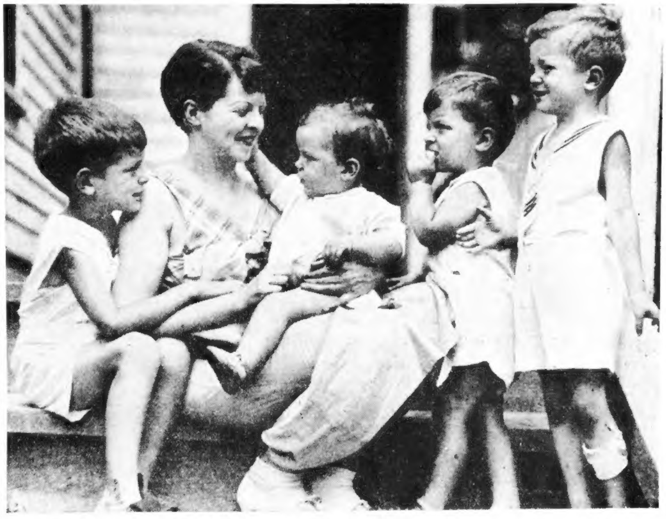
One might suggest a long list of stories beloved by our grandmothers which could be made into films. "Saint Elmo", "Queechy", "The Wide Wide World", "Lena Rivers", "Tempest and Sunshine", "Opening a Chestnut Burr", "The Rosary", "Ishmael, or in the Depths" and others of the old paper-backs. These could be guaranteed to empty the film palaces —if that is what is wanted—quicker than any boycott.

At least, if they insist on going on with "Pride and Prejudice," they should engage Hugh Walpole for a longer visit. If he is going to supervise "David Copperfield," he might as well do Jane Austen. And then give him a try at Trollope's "Barchester Towers." That, too, is in the Victorian manner.

Daddy's Home-Coming Cheers This Family



DONALD MRS. LOUISE McCONNELL DOUGLAS PHILIP HAROLD

Termed the victim of mistaken identity, Wilbert H. McConnell, 30, was cleared of the bad check charges that kept him in the Dedham jail for 9 months. During that time Mrs. McConnell and four sons, Donald, 6 years old; Douglas, 10 months old; Philip, 3 and Harold, 4, have been living in a small flat in Florence street, Brockton, on welfare funds provided by the town of Arlington and city of Brockton. They are happy that father has been cleared and happier that he has returned to help support them. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

DEWING BLOCKS CHECK CASES

Brockton, July 7—Wilbert H. McConnell, 30, who was cleared after serving nine months of an 18-month sentence on bad check charges, need have no fear of prosecution on three other charges, according to an assurance from District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing today.

McConnell was returned to his family after authorities found he was the victim of mistaken identification.

Regarding Sergeant Lyons' threat, District Attorney Dewing said:

"The charges to which McConnell pleaded guilty were placed on file, and Judge Williams took them into consideration in giving McConnell an 18-months' sentence on the charge of which he was mistakenly convicted.

MAN HUNTED IN WIFE-SLAYING

Wheelock, Vt., July 7 — Into ravines and through the foothills of the Green Mountains, a posse of deputy sheriffs and irate citizens plunged today for Harley Sherburne, whose wife was found cruelly beaten and murdered yesterday.

Sherburne was charged with the murder in a warrant issued to State's Attorney Sperry Waterman.

Sherburne, who worked a small farm with his wife, two sons and the wife of one of the sons, beat his wife and then shot her with a rifle that he is believed to have carried with him.

Elopers Shun Mothers to Keep Happiness

"Mother-in-law trouble" is not going to trouble Clifford White and Helen Mather, the girl who jilted Norman McLellan of the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. a few minutes before their wedding to elope with White.

Mrs. Margaret J. Mather, mother of Helen, wanted her daughter to marry McLellan, a "good steady young man with a nice job," as his friends describe him.

But Helen had other ideas on the subject. For four or five years she had been in love with Clifford White, a furniture mover of 297 Copeland street.

So she waited until a few minutes before her marriage to McLellan, Mrs. White said.

"She just slipped out when no one was looking and married my boy, whom she always had loved."

"Married to Cliff, Helen."

Since then her mother has heard nothing from her. On the other hand, Mrs. White knows nothing about her son either. She did not know of the planned elopement. She did not know where the two went. She did not know when they would come back. She had no idea where they are staying now that they are back.

2 WOMEN HELD AFTER TOASTS TO DIVORCEE

Mystery Guest Sought When He Escapes From Melee

In a gay Back Bay party that celebrated a divorce, a Roxbury man was beaten, two women were arrested and police sought a mystery man who escaped after the melee today.

The party, police said, was staged in the Boylston street apartment of Mrs. Mildred Henrique, 35, a Commonwealth avenue dressmaker, whose divorce became absolute yesterday.

FIND BEATEN MAN

A squad led by Sergeant Charles Eldridge of the Back Bay station said they found Frederick J. Powers of Francis street, Roxbury, a postal worker, unconscious on the floor outside Mrs. Henrique's apartment.

William Henry, janitor of the building, told them Powers was kicked and beaten by a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Mabel Clark, 27, of Bowdoin street, Dorchester. They said they learned later that Mrs. Clark was in reality the wife of Powers and that Powers had stalked the apartment in a demand that his wife leave the party and accompany him home.

Powers was hurried to City Hospital, where doctors treated him for scores of cuts and bruises. Police then arrested Henrique and Mrs. Clarke (or Powers) on charges of drunkenness.

MAN AIDS WOMEN

During the melee, the janitor reported, the unidentified mystery man stood over the prone form of Powers and assisted in the beating that was administered. He disappeared when the janitor left the hallway to telephone police.

Both women were held for appearance in Roxbury court on the drunkenness charges. They said they didn't know the name of the other man.

PODERJAY WILL BE FREED

By International News Service

Vienna, July 7—Captain Ivan Poderjay, dashing Jugo-Slavian officer who has been under arrest here for several weeks in connection with the disappearance of Miss Agnes Tufverson, New York woman lawyer, whom he married, will be released within the next few days, the Vienna police announced today.

Poderjay's woman companion, Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, whom he married in London before his admittedly bigamous marriage to Miss Tufverson, also will be set at liberty.

The police announced they were forced to take this decision because American authorities had made no move for the extradition of Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand.

O. O. McIntyre
NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, July 7—They dragged me, a golf atheist, out to a Great Neck course. Rube Goldberg and John Golden did. I went to the country to sit on verandahs, gaze pensively out to sea and meditate on the blessed promises. But here I am in borrowed golf togs wandering around like a fellow lost after an airplane crash.

O. O. McIntyre

Four bysitters saw me try to tee off, miss and grab for my falling britches in one stroke. Two, with no more culture than razor backs, laughed out loud and the other two pretended to be hunting for something behind a tree. I suppose no one grunts "oof!" when swinging a club.

And can I help it if my pants don't fit? This time I'll hit that ball if I have to do a little plowing under. I not only hit it, but I bequeath the club the makings of a first class well with love and kisses. I believe I tore something loose in that first wild swing.

Snapped like a new pair of suspenders. Maybe it was a ligament. That would be me. One swing at a golf ball and I'm laid up string-halted for the summer. I have a nice home, good neighbors, a zither and three charge accounts but I leave all to come out here and bust a puckering string.

Little man what now? Just stand like a sap I suppose. This is Gene Buck's jersey pull-on. You could toss a dog down my neck at 30 paces. That caddy—the cad—motions me to come on. I'll start, ouch, when I'm ready. I want to deep breathe awhile. One, two, three—exhale. One, two—I knew it! A lung or something has slipped its mooring. Hear that funny whistle when I inhale. Still if worst comes to worst I can go back to the river show boats. Toots McIntyre the Human Caliope!

I'm standing in someone's way. All my life I've been in someone's way. All my life, I have. All-l-ways in the way-y-y! That ball just missed me. Go ahead beat me with your clubs, tramp me in the sod. Have your fun! Hit him once, one see-gar! Someone waves from the club porch. He wants to play! No, he's motioning me away. What is it? I suppose I'm standing on a patriot's grave or where they've planted sun flowers. Don't look now but there comes a fellow in uniform. I'll act indifferent. This is free country, the hills and dales belong to the people. Thoreau once said . . .

He wants to know if anything's the matter. In the name of Aunt Clara's waxed doves under glass, here I am 30 miles from home, a nervous wreck, probably bleeding internally and wearing an outfit that would snug a Graf Zeppelin and he asks if anything is the matter? Nothing, sweetheart. I've never felt better. Want to see me do a little muscle flexing? Or maybe you'd like me to do an interpretive dance out on the greensward? You know, twitter about on my tip toes, leap for butter cups and shiver to the ground like a falling leaf. Don't you just love the big open spaces, mister, with its groves, grassy heaths, hedged roads and solitary glades?

The trouble with my game of golf is my stance. That's the four-letter-word of being pie-footed. Still one can't have everything. A lot of people would trade their stance, sight unseen, for my disappearing pencil trick. See, there it is in my hand Now where is it? Also how many with perfect stances can do my imitation of Buffalo Bill that makes me such a one at parties.

I might mosey over to that sand trap. But even if I had a little shovel and bucket I'm too weak for any kind of games. In fact my strength is ebbing fast. How hot the sun! Maybe a St. Bernard will come along with a cask of water around his neck. Headline: Strangely Dressed Body Found on Golf Course!

Even the caddy has left me. Good riding boy! Tell all the folks I asked for them in my last minutes. Have them give Ryley Cooper my salmon pink shirt. Away off yonder by the cool of the club house a group is laughing and putting. Putt, putt, putt—putt, putt, putt, putting all the day. I must remain calm.

If I ever get glued together again, bet you can't guess what. Give up? I'll help with a teeny hint. I'm never, never going near those places where they smack silly white balls with sticks. If I were—despite the agony notice my control of tenses—going in for exercise in my sedate years I'd certainly take up something not so durned stooping.

Mother's Body Hidden to Obtain Pension

By Associated Press

Seneca, Kansas, July 7—A woman who said she had kept her 88-year-old mother's disembered body hidden over two years to collect a Civil War pension is being held today by authorities.

Mrs. Myrtle Lattimer, 55, directed Sheriff C. E. Carman to the body, parts of which had been cremated in a kitchen stove, after Postmaster W. L. Kauffman had demanded to see the woman to whom the $40 monthly pension check had been issued.

Mrs. Lattimer said her mother, Mrs. Marietta Bishop, died a natural death in January, 1932. She said she did not disturb the body for several months, but finally decided to dispose of it. The upper part was cremated, she said, while the other was placed in a trunk.

Sheriff Carman said Mrs. Lattimer had used various subterfuges to cover up her mother's death. No charges have been filed.

Divorce Ends Romance

Finis was written to the romance of Donald Cook, actor, and Maxine Dailey Cook, radio singer, in Los Angeles by Judge Minor Moore, who granted Mrs. Cook a divorce and custody of the six weeks' old daughter. The romance reached a climax when she filed a $100,000 breach of promise action last November, charging betrayal. The suit was later dropped and they married in January. Hollywood Leaders Are Linked in Dope Probe

By International News Service

Los Angeles, July 7—Severing a narcotic "pipe line" believed to run from New York to Hollywood, Federal agents today were investigating dope selling conditions here, following the arrest of four men.

Several men and women, said to be prominent in Hollywood but whose names are withheld, will be questioned as the result of finding their pictures, apparently affectionately autographed, on the walls of the room of Raymond Fung, Chinese "bit" actor, one of the four arrested.

Others held on Federal narcotic charges under bond of $10,000 each were Max Weber, 30; John Kully, 32, and Pete Benson, 42, alias Harry Schlitteman, and said to have figured in the murder of Vivian Gordon, "Broadway Butterfly."

U. S. Sailors Battle French, One Seriously Wounded

By Associated Press

ice, France, July 7—It was the after" for more than 200 sail- from the U. S. S. Battleships ansas and Wyoming here, fol- ng a riotous evening ashore. enes reminiscent of the armi- e were recalled when the sail- and the citizens mixed in brawls various cafes last night.

Twenty-eight sailors were in- ured one seriously. Damage estimated at 25,00 francs (about $1625) was done.

The revelling tars were finally quelled by a naval riot squad just before dawn and packed back to their ships to be dealt with by their officers.

Nice beauties, said by police to have been a cause of the trouble, now are safe, for the prefect requested naval officers not to let the sailors return.

James Kline, 22, a wireless operator aboard the Arkansas, is in a hospital here in a grave condition with a bullet wound in his neck. He was shot by Leon Curpy, chief of the Surete police.

Curpy said before he drew his pistol, Kline knocked him down three times, kicked him and blacked an eye. The officer also was taken to a hospital but was able to leave after treatment. He will not return to work for two weeks.

The chief said he went to the aid of the wife of a lawyer who was being molested on the street.

Citizens battled the sailors, who became gayer as the night progressed in five different places simultaneously.

Anti-Nazi Meet Put Up to Dowd

Whether or not an anti-Nazi group may be allowed to stage a demonstration next Monday evening at the Parkman bandstand is to be decided on today by Acting-Mayor John F. Dowd after findings of an investigation made by police have been given him today.

The petitioners are the Boston committee to aid the victims of German Fascism.

SCHOOL PLANS STIR ROXBURY

High hopes were held by West Roxbury residents over the proposed $1,200,000 project for the enlargement of the Robert Gould Shaw school and the erection of a new intermediary school in that section, when city council yesterday passed the order to a second reading. Final consideration will come up at the next council meeting July 23.

Objections to the city borrowing more money in order to finance the project was voiced by Henry L. Shattuck, councilman from the Back Bay. Shattuck stated that the city was too deeply in debt at the present time.

Norma Waits in Eagerness for Thelma's Visit Today

Norma Brighton Millen, convicted bride of Murton Millen, sat in her cell at Dedham jail today, waiting patiently for a reunion with her long missing sister, Thelma. Rev. Norman Brighton, father of the girls, announced a message had been received promising Thelma's arrival in Boston today or tomorrow.

Rev. Brighton, whose visits to Norma at the jail have been cut to a half-hour stay each week, said that if the long-missing daughter arrives early enough, he will take her to see Norma immediately. If she arrives late in the day, the visit will not be made until some time Sunday.

Murton and Irving Millen and Abe Faber, convicted murder trio, will probably be allowed exercise periods again next week, it was learned when Dedham jail officials announced that six state troopers guarding the trio will return to their barracks as soon as Sheriff Samuel H. Capen secures new guards.

The message stating that Thelma Brighton Marten, sister of Norma, would arrive here either today or tomorrow, was contained in a postal car received by Norma at Dedham jail.

That the postal card was actually sent by the long missing sister of Murton Millen's convicted bride, neither Norma nor the father of the two girls, the Rev. Norman Brighton, have the slightest doubt.

New York Faces New Taxes

New York, July 7 (INS)—New York state taxpayers today faced the prospect of new taxation, foreshadowed by Governor Herbert H. Lehman last night in a radio address in which he revealed a deficit of about $62,000,000 in the state's budget.

VATICAN CALLS WORLD TO END TERRORISM OF HITLERITES

coiating interview given by a Vatican representative to the Action Catholics. The spokes man said:

"This is no longer merely a Catholic matter, but an affair for the whole world."

The Vatican representative referred specifically to the killing of Erich Klausner, Berlin Catholic leader, last Saturday, the shooting of Hubert Von Bose, adjutant to Vice-Chancellor Von Papen, and to the reported slaying of Father Emil Muhler.

The spokesman is quoted:

"We find no words to express our indignation and pain at the fact that Catholic leaders were slain in Germany in the same way as pathological, perverted, insurrectionists."

This was reference to the killing of Capt. Roehm, storm troop leader, and others who were publicly stigmatized.

He continued:

'Millions Who Affirm Christ Against Nazi'

"The Vatican does not stand alone on the defensive. Allied with us are all who affirm Christ, whether they look to Rome or not.

"This front of many hundred millions will not be broken by any modern Nero."

Copies of the newspaper containing the interview were being passed from hand to hand by Catholics today, despite efforts of the ministry of propaganda to exclude foreign newspapers.

Hitler Declares Truce; Guarded From Assassin

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press

Berlin, July 7—A political truce was put into effect today by the Nazi high command in a determined effort to efface all remaining traces of Germany's bloody "second revolution."

Chancellor Hitler left for his summer home in the Bavarian Alps for inspiration while his trusted sub-leaders [illegible] first rest since their party's purging of "plotters and traitors."

Guards have been redoubled in Berlin following reports that friends of Ernst Roehm, storm troop chief of staff who was executed ast Saturday, were plotting for revenge.

WOO TROOP'S FAVOR

It was understood that storm troopers in civilian clothes held a secret meeting last night caling for "revenge," despite an order a week ago that storm troopers refrain from gathering together for any purpose.

It becomes more and more apparent that the storm troopers, of which Roehm was the leader, are not going to be dissolved, as had been indicated immediatey after Hiter crushed the plot against his authority, which Roehm and others had hatched.

The Nazi's issued a carefully phrased statement last night saying that the storm troops and the Nazi party belong to each other, and cannot be separated. The statement was made by Rudolf Hesse, minister without Portfolio, and was directed toward reassuring both troopers and the general public that no drastic action was contemplated.

"The work of one would be senseless without the other," the statement said.

The 2,000,000 storm troopers, temporarily stripped of their uniform, are on a month's vacation. Their future has become Germany's foremost political problem. A powerful political instrument, these peace-time soldiers are being treated as if they might become greater in power than their creator.

VON PAPEN HOLDS ON

Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen when seen at his home today seemed in better spirits, as if reflecting the prevailing tendency toward poltical peace.

He wore a generous smile which completely masked his feelings regarding recent climatic events which many believed represented his own narrow escape from death.

"My plans are not yet complete," he told the associated Press. "Everything is still unsettled."

The vice chancellor's home is still under guard but he goes and comes at will, occasionally visiting a nearby church for prayer. While party chiefs were gathering new strength, apparently they were letting von Papen's ase drop for the moment.

Despite the political truce, the that special vigilance on all fronts by the secret police will continue undiminished.

LONG REST FOR HITLER

There was intimation that Hitler's short respite in the Bavarian hills may be extended to a possibly longer vacation.

It was announced at the Chancellor's office that no further cabinet meetings are planned during July.

Hitler Fired Shots to Kill Friend, Claim

By International News Service

Paris, July 7—The sensational charge that Adolf Hitler personally shot and killed his friend, Capt. Ernst Roehm, commander of the storm troops, during last week's revolt in Germany was attributed by the Paris Midi today to Walter Flexius, a section chief of the Brown Shirts who fled from Berlin to the Saar.

Flexius's charges, according to the Midi, were made in a booklet which is being distributed today at Saarbrucken.

The booklet, it was alleged, also declared that 200 had been executed and that 6000 were under arrest in Germany.

Hitler personally killed Roehm without warning, firing two bullets into his body, Flexius was alleged to have asserted. Then the German chancellor killed Edmund Heines, another troop troop leader.

There was no orgy going on, Flexius was said to have stated, although Hitler knew of Roehm's delinquency. Roehm had spent the night in conferences with Hitler and the chancellor had personally searched Roehm's villa. After the shooting, Flexius was quoted as saying, Hitler departed for Berlin.

Hitler Jails Duesterberg Former Helmet Chief

By Associated Press

Munich, Germany, July 7—Theodore Duesterberg, former steel helmet troop leader and a candidate for President of Germany in 1932, is in a concentration camp at Dachau after his seizure by Chancellor Hitler's picked guards last Sunday, it was learned today from a reliable source.

Duesterberg was spending a vacation at Bad Kreuth in the Tegernsee district when he was hauled out of bed at 1 a. m. by a squad of Hitlerites.

He was taken to the nearest secret police headquarters and after a long hearing was carried back to his boarding house and permitted to pack his clothes. Then he was taken to Dachau.

President von Hindenburg has been notified of Duesterberg's arrest and his intervention is expected by the latter's friends.

His arrest was believed to have been unauthorized. Sources here said it was inconceivable that Duesterberg was connected with a storm troop conspiracy against Hitler.

Resort Residents Tell Story of Hitler's 'Storm Scene'

By Associated Press

Bad Weisse, Bavaria, Germany July 7—A description of Chancellor Hitler awakening the whole neighborhood with piercing shots during his sensational conspiracy arrests here early last Saturday was given today by residents in this resort city.

This fresh element in the story of events that led to suppression of Germany's "second revolution" differs from official versions in intimate revelations from a neighbor's point of view.

HITLER FURIOUS

People living in the beautiful resort at Gegernsee, where most villagers are tonguetied in the presence of foreigners, revealed that Hitler's screaming awakened everybody, but before people had time to dress, the automobiles bearing the leader and those accompanying him already had departed.

"Hitler was furious," villagers said.

Only piecemeal bits of the story could be elicited. Actual witnesses were few, although the time of the storm scene is placed at 7 o'clock in the morning. No one in the vicinity ventured nearer than his own window sill.

The setting was not, as official reports said, the official luxurious country mansion serving as a kind of storm troop headquarters, residents claim. They say it was a respectable middle class pension, built in Alpine style on the edge of a lake.

ROEHM ON REST

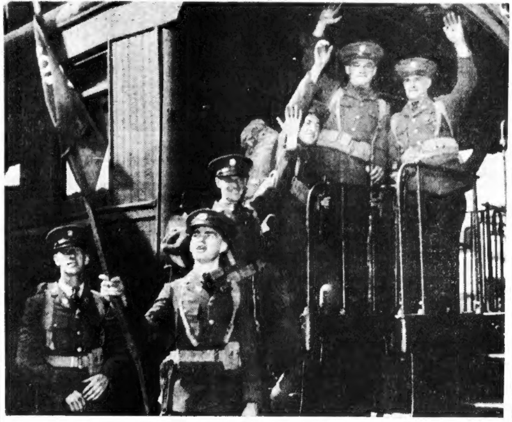
The late Ernst Roehm, former storm troop head, had been spending a vacation there. Natives said Hitler had visited here a week or two previously, but had stayed at a house across the lake, while Hitler's secret police chief, who is credited with uncovering the revolt, was visiting nearby.

None but prominent guests are ade admitted to the pension, which has been besieged by the curious since a government statement gave it a "house of sin" reputation.

No one seems to have seen Roehm at the time of his arrest. A rumor that Roehm had committed suicide was carried in Berlin the Wednesday before he was shot.

Yankee Division Off for Devens

Coats off was the command given to these men as they prepared for the hot train ride to Fort Devens today. But they didn't mind the heat in the excitement of leaving. It was a grand spectacle to see them marching, 1500 strong, through the concourse of the North Station. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)



These men of Company A, 101st Infantry, M. N. G., are waving enthusiastic good byes to the large crowd of friends and relatives who saw them off for Fort Devens at the North Station today. The men certainly look happy to be on the way for their annual duty tour.

'KIDNAPED' TRIO SAFE AT HOME

Holyoke, July 7—Police throughout western Massachusetts were stirred when the self-styled victim of an alleged holdup and kidnaping "positively identified" one of the outlaws as John Dillinger, Indiana desperado.

John Matka of Millers Falls staggered into a gasoline station here and gasped out a story of machine gun bandits stoppping an auto in which he, his wife and another couple were riding. He said that he escaped, while the gunmen carried off the other three.

State and federal police scoured highways for the kidnapers, but meanwhile it was discovered that the "victims" were safe at home. Eventually it was learned that Matka was evicted from the car after he is alleged to have become abusive to the others.

Ex-Kaiser Now Great Grandad

Berlin, July 7—Former Kaiser Wilhelm, at the age of 75, has become a great-grandfather.

Announcement was made of the birth of a daughter to Prince Wilhelm of Prussia, oldest son of the former crown prince, who broke the Hohenzollern tradition by marrying Dorothea von Salviati, a commoner, in Jur , 1933.

Man to Permit Son's Cure

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 7—John Hoffman, Sr., says he'd be "laying down on God" if he consented to an operation, but he "won't resist" surgical aid for his son's crippled leg if the courts order it.

Still insisting that the 16-year-old son's broken knee—fractured two years ago—is an "act of God," and that medicine or surgery to ease the youth's suffering would be a "direct violation of the will of the Creator," the father continued firm in his stand that where faith healing fails there is no remedy.

He was hailed into court Thursday by the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty. He said:

"If the judge orders hospital treatment, then I won't resist, but I'm certain that it's wrong."

Rays Separated, File Debt Pleas

Hollywood, July 7—Charles Ray, who is attempting a comeback in motion pictures, and Mrs. Clara Grant Ray have been separated a year, she disclosed today. They remain on friendly terms and have not discussed a divorce, Mrs. Ray said, but found their interests incompatible. They were arried in 1915. Both filed voluntary petitions in bankruptcy yesterday. The former silent motion picture star listed debts of $29,294 and assets of $350. His wife said she owed $29,397 and had only $400.

HARBOR BUSY IN WEEK-END

Today, tomorrow and Monday 35 ships are scheduled to arrive and depart here, the largest shipping week-end this year.

Today the Georgic of the Cunard White Star, Ltd., hailing from Queenstown, Liverpool and Galway, is scheduled to debark 111 passengers at Commonwealth Pier. At the Cunard Pier, East Boston, the S. S. California will dock with passengers and cargo from Glasgow and Belfast.

Tonight, a few coastal ships, the Eastern Steamship Lines ships with passengers and freight, the Laconia of the Cunard White Star Line and the steamer West Kebar from West Africa, will stop here to pick up passengers.

When the Laconia arrives she will have a group of pilgrims from New York aboard. Another group will be picked up here for the pilgrimage to the holy mountain of Croagh Patrick, Westport, on the Atlantic coast of Ireland. The Most Reverend Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore, heads the pilgrimage.

6100 IN THE YD OFF TO CAMP

The Yankee Division, 6100 officers and enlisted men, is on the move again.

With guidons and colors flapping gaily in the breeze, all units of the famous wartime division set forth from armories in various sections of the state for the move by train to Fort Devens, for the annual 15-day tour of duty.

All units of the division are included in the move to Devens, with the exception of artillery and air forces.

The artillery is to move, late in August as a brigade to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., where it will have the benefit of working on the regular army artillery range.

The air force units attached to the division will move later in the summer to camp on Cape Cod for maneuvers.

LEAVE NORTH STATION

The Boston contingent and their equipment are scheduled to leave the North Station for Fort Devens at 9:15, 9:25, 10:05 and 10:15, daylight saving time, this morning. Special trains to transport members of the YD are also scheduled to leave from Haverhill, Malden, Marlboro, Natick, Westfield, Pittsfield and Holyoke. National Guardsmen from Quincy, Lynn, Norwood Central, Attleboro, Hingham and Plymouth will arrive in Boston on regular trains in time to make connections with the local specials.

Troop movements starting today will be under the direction of Major General Erland F. Fish. Other officers in charge of sections of the division include Brigadier General Daniel Needham in command of artillery; Colonel Warren S. Keith, of Brockton, 101st Field Artillery and Colonel Roger W. Eckfeldt, of Cambridge, commanding the 102nd Field Artillery.

CHAPLAINS AT CAMP

Colonel Albert W. Foreman, U. S. A., is camp commander at Devens. Brigadier-General Arthur W. Desmond of Boston will be the commanding officer of the 51st Brigade, while Brigadier-General Edmund J. Slate of Holyoke will be in command of the 52d Brigade, for the second year.

Rev. Abbott Peterson of Brookline, with the rank of major, will be the division chaplain. Rev. Michael J. O'Connor of Framingham, who distinguished himself as a chaplain overseas with the YD, and who now is chaplain emeritus, also is expected at the camp. Fr. O'Connor now holds the rank of brigadier-general in the militia.

4 FACE COURT IN DOLE CASE

Four East Boston men faced court today on charges of fraudulent use of rubber stamps to certify work cards of welfare recipients. The arrests were the result of welfare department investigations.

The men held are Domenic La Bella, 26, of Chelsea street; Onofrio Mazzone, 36, of Princeton street, and two brothers, Alphonso Nappi, 32, and Armand Nappi, 34, all of East Boston. They are charged with larceny from the welfare department.

According to police, the men stamped cards of persons who would fail to appear at work in the East Boston city yard. The recipient would collect a day's pay, out of which he paid the "stamp man" 50 cents, it is charged.

Girl Pin-Sticker Hunted at Fair

Chicago, July 7—Search for a moron with a propensity for sticking pins in young women at the World's Fair was begun here.

Fair officials reported that on successive nights two young women had been treated at the hospital for mysterious pin wounds received while attending a show at he exposition. Each had three tiny wounds.

Federal Wages Remain Slashed

Washington, July 7—Hopes of federal employes for immediate restoration of the last third of their 15 per cent pay cut were blasted here when President Roosevelt issued an executive order, postponing the restoration

Havana, July 7 (INS)—A bomb exploded today in the office of the Peninsular & Occidental Steamship Company. Damage was slight.

Rockefeller Plans Quiet Birthday

By Associated Press

Lakewood, N. J., July 7—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., will be 95 years old tomorrow, but to the aged philanthropist it will be just another day; a day of activity carefully curtailed; a day of diet strictly regulated.

John D. Rockefeller

Members of his family will be there and the man who was once hailed as "the richest man in the world" may have a short drive over the estate with them, or perhaps there will be instead a game of "numerica," Mr. Rockefeller's simple number game played with cards.

No celebration has been planned. The famous "birthday statements" will not be issued.

CUTS CHURCH, GOLF

Since his return to the Lakewood estate in May after his longest winter stay at his Ormond Beach, Fla., home, Mr. Rockefeller has discontinued even his customary Sunday church going and his much-loved golfing over the nine hole private course on his estate here.

A few short automobile rides are his only attraction. His mail, in the past extremely heavy, has dwindled.

DAILY ROUTINE SIMPLE

Since his illness during the winter, his daily routine has been a model of simplicity. It is the routine he will follow tomorrow.

He rises at 7 a. m. and has his breakfast an hour later. After breakfast, he scans mail and his secretary reads aloud the news.

Leisurely luncheon is at 1:30. At 3 o'clock he is motored about the estate and then has a nap before dinner at 7.30. At 10, he retires.

COUNCIL ACTS ON COATS

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today faced a demand by the city council that he say either "yes or no" in regards to Boston police officers doffing their coats during hot weather.

Each time the question was presented to the police head, he would side step the role of fashion arbiter with the remark that he preferred not to take action on the matter. Yesterday the city council passed an order requesting the commissioner to make a positive or negative reply.

toll of the hot wave, which has held New England in its grip for over a week.

Despite the promise, however, hundreds of motorists made their way to the beaches.

Showers and a shift of wind to the northwest this afternoon or tonight is what the weatherman predicted in the way of relief.

John Somma, 19, of 28 Bremen street, East Boston, received treatment at the East Boston Relief hospital, after he was overcome by the intense heat.

The five persons drowned were: Leo St. John, 43, of Burlington, drowned in Burlington, Vt.; Lawrence Callahan, 34, of Sandwich street, Plymouth, drowned in Plymouth harbor; George Hutchins, 13, of Garfield avenue, Chelsea, drowned in Bristol, N. H.; Leo Scafida, 19, of School street, Waltham, drowned in Lyman's pond, and Attorney Thomas P. Shea of Longmeadow, drowned in Brookfield.

DEATH TAKES 2 FILM LEADERS

By International News Service

Hollywood, July 7—Death rang down the curtain today for two men who have played important roles in the development of the moving picture.

Casting directors considered Francis ideal for movie roles, calling for a British nobleman, a kindly minister, an aristocratic butler, or an elderly man of the world.

One of his best known parts was in the role of "The Music Master," and he also won applause in such films as "Smilin' Through," "Mata Hari," "Arrowsmith," "Outward bound," and "The Return of Peter Grimm."

Francis died after an emergenc operation.

Pollard, whose wife the form Margarita Fischer, was known "The American Beauty," su cumbed to a heart ailment. began his directing career 20 ye ago, was an important factor bringing Reginald Denny to st dom, and more recently has be directing at M. G. M.

CALL DOCTOR IN DEATH PROB.

Lawrence, July 7—A conferen between medical experts and polic was called today in the investiga tion into the death of Karol Gribok wealthy grocer who died las month.

Gribok's death was due to pneumonia, according to the death certificate, but examination of the vital organs by Dr. William Boos, Harvard toxicologist, revealed a quantity of arsenic.

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston pathologist, was called into the case by District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg.

With Dr. Boos and police, he will go over the entire case.

Several witnesses will be questioned by the conferees. The possibility of the exhumation of both Gribok and Stephen Kubara's body, the latter the widow's first husband, who died several years ago, will also be determined.

Today police admitted that investigation thus far failed to show results, but they expected action within the next 48 hours.

Following a visit to the Municipal Hospital, where state detectives and Lawrence police officials examined hospital records, the investigators reviewed the last months of the grocer's life.

LIVINGSTON ON HONEYMOON

M. Eli Livingston, Cambridge attorney, whose citation of his love for "the girl who was waiting" in a plea for leniency in federal court proceedings against disbarment in 1927 were of no avail, is honeymooning in New York city toda following his marriage yesterday to Miss Louise F. Fine, 27, of 3 University road, Brookline.

Livingston was arrested in 1927 on a secret federal indictmen charging him with conspiracy to conceal assets in bankruptcy belonging to the estate of Isadore Freeman, arrested on similar charges.

In a plea to Federal Court, Livingston declared that if disbarred, it would mean the end of his romance with a girl he intended to make his wife. The court ordered him disbarred for five years. Whether Miss Fine is the girl he referred to at that time, could not be learned today.

YOUNG BIRDMEN LAUNCH GALA PLANE DERBY

With the blast of a whistle as the starting gun, 79 enthusiastic contestants began an all-day race at 9 this morning for high honors and rewards in the First Annual Official New England Model Plane Derby for Junior Birdmen.

While hundreds of interested spectators watched the flights, the contestants launched their model planes into the air above the Playstead in Franklin Park, striving to win the title of New England's best model plane flier, the Boston Evening American wing trophy and the chance to go to Washington, D. C., with all expenses paid, to compete in the national contest on July 28.

Today's tournament continues until 6 tonight, closing with the distribution of the trophy and 18 gold, silver and bronze medals, to be awarded to runners-up.

SIX EVENTS ARRANGED

There were to be six events, three for Group "B," consisting of members between 10 and 15 years old, and three similar events for Group "A," members of from 16 to 21. The events consist of an all-Balsa glider, a single propelled stick model and a double propelled stick model contest.

All events are for endurance, the model remaining in the air the longest, winning the contest.

One hundred points will be scored by the contestant gaining first place in each event, while a lesser number of points will be given runners-up. The contestant scoring the most points in all events will be hailed as New England's best model plane flier.

YOUNGER HAVE CHANCE

The tournament is the first outdoor flying competition for Junior Birdmen and the models, of various colors and sizes, have been built from lessons in a course of instruction printed in the Junior Birdmen column of this paper.

The 79 contestants consist of 39 Group "A" members and 40 Group "B" members. Under the system of scoring, the younger entrants have an equal chance with the more experienced members in winning the main prize.

Milton Rosengard Robert Shea

Among the older contestants are Doolittles and Haizlips, youths whose prowess in model plane making and flying is recognized throughout New England. The contestants include former national, sectional and city champions and youths who usually force a keen fight before they go down to defeat.

Other contestants include Lawrence Cregar, 13, of 200 Hyde Park avenue, Jamaica Plain; Robert Shea, 16, of 59 Dunboy street, Brighton; Robert French, 16, of 14 Colby road, North Quincy, and Milton Rosengard, 11, of 1259 Commonwealth avenue, Allston.

IT'S AN ALL-DAY OUTING

All the 7400 Junior Birdmen in the Boston Evening American wing have been invited to attend the tournament and bring their relatives and friends, making the occasion an all-day outing in the park.

Under the leadership of Mayor Mansfield as honorary chairman of the official committee for the derby city officials are co-operating to make the meet a success.

Lawrence Cregar Robert French

A bandstand was erected under orders of W. P. Long, head of the Boston park commission, and a loudspeaker system installed that spectators might learn the official results.

Among the guests at the meet were Lawrence Shaw, of New York, national director of the Junior Birdmen, and Mrs. Shaw.

The committee for the derby consisted of Carl Dreyfus, chairman, and Edward W. Herne, state secretary, Y. M. C. A.; O. A. Kitterman, executive, Boston District Boy Scouts; Walter E. Myers, president, Advertising Club of Boston; A. L. Edson, superintendent Municipal airport, and Crocker Snow and Paul Collins, veteran pilots.

Candid Catches Co-Eds

The Candid Cameraman went to the Weld Boat Club on the Charles river and caught a number of fair co-eds, proving that all work and no play makes Jane a dull girl. Nancy Lamson is ready for a spin down the Charles in her shell in this picture.

Miss Hazel D. Armitage is rowing hard and fast and furiously—but she's not getting any place. It's all in the work at the Weld club for the fair co-eds. Miss Armitage is practicing on a rowing machine at the dock. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

UNION 'BRAINS' MAP GENERAL

San Francisco, July 7—Creation of a "strike strategy committee" to aid in directing trade union action in San Francisco's waterfront conflict was voted by the General Labor Council, representing 45,000 workers, after a general strike discussion here.

The committee plan, supported by John O'Connell, secretary of the council, was carried by a vote of 165 to 8. In reply to demands for an immediate recommendation for a general strike, O'Connell said:

"This strategy committee is the same move now. It will lead to organized movement in case of a general strike later, and would mean that brains and not brawn would direct us."

One of the first problems of the "strategy committee" labor council leaders said, will be to advise and to co-operate with the various unions planning votes on the general strike movement, which has spread to Portland.

With the waterfront district quiet momentarily under the threat of bayonets and bullets for those who riot, President Roosevelt's labor disputes board prepared for public hearings Monday to determine issues, facts and practices in the strike which began May 9 when 12,000 longshoremen struck. The longshoremen have been joined since by some 15,000 allied marine workers.

Representatives of the 120 unions, with a thundering chorus of "ayes", adopted a strongly worded resolution of condemnation for use of troops on the waterfront.

HARVARD TOWN WARS ON NUDE

Harvard, July 7—Nudists may come and nudists go but no colony of the unclad is to disturb the equanimity of this town and the summer vacation rest of its most famous resident, James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University.

Mr. and Mrs. Conant now are touring Europe but are expected to return here for a late summer stay, regardless of the clotheless furore.

Reports that a secret cult of nudists had started foundations of a colony that was to be enlarged during the summer months sent town fathers on the warpath.

Protests first came from the exclusive Bear Hill pond section, with the result that town constables patrolled the section in the hunt for the sun worshippers.

Police claimed that the nudist colony reports grew from moonlight swimming parties staged by a few of the more daring members of the summer colony, but the town fathers claim the patrol will continue until all reports of nudists have been checked and double-checked.

Chief of Police Houghton, of the town department, made it plain that nudists are banned from the town limits as long as he holds the reins of power. In any event, bathing suits will rule the water activities of the summer colony.

Last Rites for Drown Victim

Funeral services were being planned today for Leo Scafida, 19, of 161 School street, Waltham, drowned while trying to swim across Lyman's pond in Waltham. Scafida was drowned after George Eden of 177 Summer street and John Ryan of 179 Summer street made several unsuccessful tries to save his life.

LEADER FIGHTS SHOE CODE BAN

Washington, July 7—Bitter opposition was expressed here by Harry M. Jacobs of Boston to proposed modifications of the heel and sole divisions of the rubber manufacturing code, which would outlaw the commercial sale of "seconds" and permit the sale of obsolete or discontinued products only under specific regulations.

Jacobs, president of the Jacobs Leather Co., told an NRA hearing n the proposed amendments that "If this amendment goes through I'll be put out of business."

He said he had for years been buying seconds and obsolete goods, and, exhibiting samples of nationally known rubber heels, asserted that seconds frequently outwore the first-class merchandise.

TOOTER FLEES RAIDERS' NET

Baltimore, July 7 — In a raid reminiscent of prohibition days, police swooped down on a night club here and arrested 27 persons —but it wasn't for liquor. It was to silence the saxophone player.

Through boiling hot nights neighbors had tossed and tumbled and stood the tooting of the saxophone, the main instrument in a three-piece band. Finally they complained to police, who backed a patrol wagon up to the establishment and hauled away every person in sight.

The magistrate sympathized. He said:

"By the way, which one is the saxophone player?"

"He got away," said Sergeant Joseph sadly.

HOMELESS GIRL TRIES DEATH

In a serious condition at the Boston City Hospital a girl claiming to be Helen Sullivan 21, homeless, continued to plead with attendants today to let her die.

The girl who told police that she came to Boston from New York about four weeks ago was rushed to the hospital early this morning after police say she collapsed on the boat landing in the Public Gardens from iodine poisoning.

According to police, the girl was despondent because she could not get work. They said she drank half the contents of a bottle of iodine, for which she spent her last few pennies. Police were attracted by her screams and upon arrival at the landing, found the girl in a state of collapse.

GIRL MISSING, MAN SOUGHT

A Saugus man, father of two children, is being sought today by police in the mysterious disappearance of Florence Lord, 18-year-old student nurse of the Lynn Hospital.

The Saugus man was brought into the case when the girl's mother, Mrs. Albert Beebe of 15 Ames street, Lynn, informed police that she had learned that her daughter was keeping company with the man. Police went to an address in Saugus and learned the man had left.

Miss Lord, a brunette, left her home July 1 to attend a movie and has not been seen since.

you can believe little of what you read or hear.

You read that Cardinal Faulhaber has been arrested and locked up. Next day that is not so. You read of wholesale slaughter of Jews in Silesia, and an exodus of Jews. There is neither exodus nor slaughter.

Today you will read that Hitler narrowly escaped assassination. Edmund Heines, revolver in hand, was about to kill Hitler, when one of the latter's aides killed Heines. That may be true.

Holland reports a "mild revotionary outbreak by Communists." Dispatches from Berlin say some of the storm troopers are howling for revenge, and "something dangerous is brewing." The storm troopers are alleged to look upon their comrades, executed with great promptness at two a. m. by Hitler, as "martyrs."

Business methods, not too clean, continue to be revealed in New York. Men selling coal to the city are accused of stealing a million dollars, and when questioned refused to sign "waivers of immunity."

Another one of New York's financial miracles occurs. A coal clerk, getting $3000 a year, is able to put $77,000 in the bank in four years. Strange arithmetic. The business of this remarkable economical city clerk was buying coal for the city.

One of the big coal companies selling coal to the city carried on its payroll a certain notorious racketeer criminal. Only the weakling child will wonder how such a man could be useful to a coal company.

New 'Sub' Makes 268-Foot Plunge

Portsmouth, N. H., July 7—The new United States submarine Cachelot dived 268 feet in a test on the government's measured course between Boone Island and the Isles of Shoals. This was seven feet more than her designed depth, officials said.

The craft remained submerged 12 minutes. The dive was five feet deeper than that of her sister ship, the Cuttlefish, a year ago.

The Cachelot will undergo final builder's tests later this month.

Powder Nose on Own Time, Warns Ickes in Checkup

By Universal Service

Washington, July 7—Several thousand Interior Department workers, much to their embarrassment, learned more about Secretary Ickes' quiet little stroll the other day.

They heard it from Ickes himself, in pleasant but firm tones:

"If you ladies must powder your noses and primp, do it on your own time, not on the government's."

But, inasmuch as it was a mass meeting to celebrate Ickes' first anniversary as PWA administrator, he took the curse off his scolding somewhat by adding that most of the workers under him have done a fine job during the past year, and deserve a pat on the back.

The scolding was the result of a little stroll Ickes took around the Interior Department building several days ago, when he found two young ladies playing dominoes, a male clerk reading a newspaper with his feet on the desk, another with his shoes off cleaning them, and several hundred clerks leisurely eating breakfast in the cafeteria a half hour after the department had started work for the day.

Not too harshly, "Prexy" Ickes told his student body that he hopes the bad influence of the few drones won't spread to the ranks of the "busy bees."

Paul, who is 3½ years old, is the youngest singer who has ever appeared on this program. Billie, who is 7, is clever in singing "Skat" songs. Second time on the air for both boys.

You Hear Them on Radio

EDA CLARA BEE
FRIM SISTERS

The Frim Sisters . . . Who aren't . . . One of them being Beatrice Brest . . . And they are all very frank about it . . . Being nice girls . . . But Clara and Eda are Frim . . . And will be remembered at Cambridge High and Latin.

It's all a coincidence that the girls . . . Bee went to Girl's High in Boston . . . Came to be billed as sisters . . . The thing happening in a revue . . . When Clara and Eda were singing duets . . . And Bee was a soloist . . . With the program long . . . And the time short . . . And the girls being asked to combine the acts . . . Which they did And three girls became sisters . . . Who now are rated with the Boswells.

These girls are very frank . . Because they can afford to be . . . Bee at 22 . . . Clara at 23 . . And Eda at 24 . . . Which will be held against them 10 years from now And they all work daytims . . . As typists.

In two years the girls have mastered a dandy repertoire . . . Including 130 song numbers . . .

Bea holds a seecretarial position in Quincy . . . Is a lover of the finer music . . . Is the peacemaker when disputes arise . . . And you know girls in dispute.

Eda is manager of a downtown Boston office . . . Is the comedian of the group . . . But will not perform in public . . . Except before close friends.

Clara is a steno in an uptown office building . . . And started as a soprano . . . But something happened to her voice . . . And now has the lowest register of the three darlings.

NEW SHOWS AT METROPOLITAN AND STATE-:-ROBINSON CRUSOE COMING TO SCREEN

Kay Francis in 'Dr. Monica' at Met

By HARRIS MORGAN

A quirk of motion picture fate sees Kay Francis as a woman physician administer to her young rival for her husband's love as the extra-legal baby in the case arrives in the world. This awkward synopsis of the big situation in "Dr. Monica," which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater, is no more awkward than the way the long arm of coincidence coils around the dramatic probabilities in this new film. Nor for that matter is it much more awkward than the situation in which one of those "daring" triangle stories finds itself when counterposed to the Massachusetts Sunday censorship.

If you plan on seeing "Dr. Monica" before Monday, it would be well to visit the Metropolitan today. Because there won't be any "Dr. Monica" tomorrow. Something more simple to censor is being substituted. Your Mr. Morgan wasn't wild about "Dr. Monica." Nor did he enthuse about "Black and White Jamboree," the fast-moving revue which accompanies the picture. But for an unusual spectacle, your same Mr. M. cannot hold himself from mentioning the Junior Symphony Orchestra, which, under the baton-ing of Fabien Sevitzky, worked adult wonders with their instruments.

Watching these young musicians saw on their fiddles and beat their drums and blow their horns according to the manuscript of Victor Herbert's "American Fantasy" was a pleasure. And hearing them was not displeasing at all. Well, at the 8 to 10 p. m. period at the luxurious Tremont street house last night the customers were arrayed in solid phalanx, dodging the heat and really enjoying themselves.

"Dr. Monica" is the story of a she-doctor who adores her husband, a writer. She learns that he has been untrue to her through the abetment of a blonde trick, enacted tearfully and adequately by Jean Muir. Comes the baby and Dr. Monica assists in its arrival. These dramatic incidents are relieved (for which thanks) by the screen presence of that fine actress, Veree Teasdale, who plays the friend of Dr. Monica and is relievably comic and natural. Warren William, sans mustache, is the husband. I like him better with his mustache. The baby in the film is excellent.

Ruggles Wins Film Laurels at State

By AL DUFFY

Charlie Ruggles tucks his trusty pipe carefully into his mouth, smiles affectionately at Una Merkel, and then romps nonchalantly off with most of the laurels in "Murred in the Private Car," the feature attraction at Loew's State this week.

"Murder In the Private Car" is a swiftly paced melange of melodrama and farce, and we'll guarantee that it will give you your full quota of thrills and laughs. For melodrama you have a madman, a gorilla, a monkey and a private railroad car, the like of which you have never seen before in your life. It is complete with sliding panels, tricky lights, steel shutters to seal the windows and doors, a short wave radio set and a lethal load of explosives.

And if that isn't enough to jade your appetite for thrills, they attach this cute little conveyance to the rear end of a transcontinental train and then uncouple it to roll back down grade and blow its occupants to smithereens.

There's a hair-raising transfer of passengers from the runaway car to a pursuing locomotive and just about as rapid a job of switching from one track to another as you've seen since the days when Ruth Roland and Pearl White were doing their stuff.

But for us the chief delight of the picture was the aforementioned Mr. Ruggles and his mad vagaries.

Una Merkel, Mary Carlisle, petite and pretty as ever, Berton Churchill, and a gentleman of color who calls himself "Snowflake" and many others contribute their full share to making "Murder in the Private Car" thrilling and exciting while Mr. Ruggles makes it really comic.

A Laurel and Hardy comedy, "Going Bye-Bye," an animated cartoon, the news weekly and other short subjects complete a really good hot weather program in what is truthfully advertised as the delightfully cool State theater.

Pops Close Tonight

The following program consisting entirely of special favorites of the Pops public will be presented at the season's closing concert by Arthur Fiedler tonight. The numbers follow:

Marche Militaire	Schubert
Overture to "Der Freischutz"	Weber
Valse Triste	Sibelius
"Aida," Fantasia	Verdi
Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker,"	Tchaikovsky
Marche Miniature	Tchaikovsky
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812."	Tchaikovsky
Victor Herbert Favorites, arranegd by Stanford
Dance of the Mosquito	White
Prayer of Thanksgiving (Old Dutch Hymn).	arranged by Kremser

Added to Cast

Samuel Hinds and Paul Hervey have been added to the cast of Hat, Coat and Glove," the RKO Radio picturization of the Broadway play now in production with Ricardo Cortez in the lead.

Favorites of the Screen Feature the New Bills

Helen Mack has a feature role in "Kiss and Make Up," now on the Uptown and Paramount screens.

Charles Butterworth is in "The Return of Bulldog Drummond" which comes to Loew's State next Friday.

Marion Davies' 'Operator 13' Thrills on Orpheum Screen

Marion Davies, in one of her most brilliant roles, is the stellar attraction at Loew's Orpheum this week. Miss Davies, with Gary Cooper as her leading man, is the star of "Operator 13," adapted from Robert W. Chambers' popular story of Civil War days.

As Gail Loveless, famous stage beauty of the 60's, who is drafted into service as a spy for the Union armies, Miss Davies finds a glamorous, romantic role for her talents.

Assigned to kill or capture the dashing Southern officer, played by Mr. Cooper, Gail Loveless meets him and falls in love with him instead. High adventure and romantic melodrama are woven against the background of historic battle scenes and brilliant social functions of the beleaguered southland.

In the adaptation of the Chambers story, Richard Boleslavsky, who directed "Operator 13" splendidly, was able to bring the four Mills Brothers into the picture as entertainers in Ted Healey's itinerant medicine show. These dusky singers harmonize some new Walter Donaldson-Gus Kahn song hits in their own unmatchable manner.

In the scenes depicting the social functions that continued throughout the war, Miss Davies has the opportunity of wearing some splendid period costumes designed by Adrian, the famous artist of Cosmopolitan productions.

Larry Rich, who has been seen here many times as the featured comedian in Broadway shows, heads the vaudeville bill, which also includes Zelaya, Diaz and Powers, the Lynn-Burno Revue and other top notch acts. A Hearst Metrotone Globetrotter news weekly and short subjects complete the program. A. H.

Two Roles for Sara Haden

Sara Haden, popular young character comedienne, has received a dual casting assignment from RKO Radio Pictures. She is to appear in the current feature "Hat, Coat and Glove," and in the next Ann Harding film "The Fountain."

"Hat, Coat and Glove" is now in its second week of production with Ricardo Cortez, Barbara Robbins, John Beal and Dorothy Burgess in the leading roles. Worthington Miner is directing.

"The Fountain" is scheduled to go before the cameras next week under John Cromwell's direction. Jean Hersholt is cast for a featured supporting role.

Miss Haden recently completed a part in Miss Harding's last film "The Life of Virgie Winters," and prior to that appeared with Katharine Hepburn in "Spitfire." She also played in RKO Radio's "Finishing School."

Pert Kelton Guest

Champ "Kiss Tester"

Bruce Cabot, who plays a leading role supporting Edna May Oliver and James Gleason, in RKO Radio Pictures' "Murder on the Blackboard," got his film start as a kiss tester. He was engaged by the RKO Radio studios to appear opposite feminine aspirants for film roles in screen tests, and showed to such good advantage, that he was placed under contract as a featured player.

Henry Hull Chosen to Portray Famous Character; Bill Haines Plans Comeback

Los Angeles, July 7—"Get the children back into the movie theaters!" is the new cry in Hollywood. The one difficulty with such a plan, according to producers, is that no one can determine just exactly what youngsters do like. Carl Laemmle, Jr., feels that "Robinson Crusoe" won't be much of a gamble, not only the kids but their poppas and mommas should enthuse over the prospect of seeing Daniel Defoe's 200-year-old thriller on the screen.

Junior had intended to make "Swiss Family Robinson," but, on reflection, decided the original "Robinson Crusoe" would be a much better idea. Henry Hull, who is now getting ready to play "Great Expectations," is slated for the character of the most famous castaway in fiction. There is a grand story in Hull himself, whose career from the time he played in "The Man Who Came Back" to "Tobacco Road" furnishes an unusual background.

It may be the idea of working with the thirteen Wampas Baby stars or Nat Levine's eloquence. Whatever the reason, Bill Haines is coming out of his retirement after two years and will smear the greasepaint. He will play the male lead in "Young and Beautiful," which Ben Lyon had to give up because of his brother's death in the East. Billy, who has been concentrating on his interior decorating business, will find Judith Allen borrowed from Paramount for the featured feminine role.

There was a time when "The Old Homestead," "Ben Hur," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Rip Van Winkle" came around to American towns more regularly than crops. Biggest favorites were Denman Thompson and Joseph Jefferson heading their companies in "The Old Homestead" and "Rip Van Winkle." A movie was made of the Washington Irving legend in 1914 and Harry Wurtzel believes it is still grand picture material. So much faith has he, that Harry is going to sponsor a production starring El Brendel as Rip. Yes, he knows El is a Swedish comedian, but he also knows that long before Brendel did Svenska comedy he played in Dutch dialect.

Now that Carole Lombard is definitely signed with them for two more years, Paramount is busily engaged in lining up suitable vehicles for her. "Soldier Woman" is the latest acquisition, to follow Damon Runyon's "Maybe a Queen." The title is deceptive. "Soldier Woman" is not about an amazon but relates the affairs of a lady with a shady past who falls in love with a society polo player. Charles R. Clifford wrote the book.

Chatter in Hollywood

The Constance Cummings-Benn Levy agreement continues to work. For the past six months Connie has been Mrs. Benn Levy. Now they are returning to Hollywood, where she will be Constance Cummings again. When the two married, the arrangement was to spend half the year in London with Connie completely the wife. The other half calls for Hollywood with Connie as a movie star. The Levys celebrated the first anniversary of their successful agreement on Tuesday in London.

CHAPTER 82

HUGH GRANTLAND'S suggestion was so astonishing to me, albeit so sane, that for a second I could only stare at him. Then as the full flavor of the plan came to me, I clapped my hands in approval.

"How very clever you are!" I exclaimed in genuine approval. "I have a very vivid mental picture of my mother-in-law's face should she find out—as she would—that Mr. Veritzen was calling me concerning a plan of Avis Arlen's to stage a reconciliation scene with Mary. Avis is one of her pet detestations. She almost foams at the mouth whenever the girl is mentioned. And I am not sure just what might be the effect upon her if she discovered that the girl had stolen the letter inviting Noel's father to his marriage."

"I know," he said, nodding his head gravely. "That is the reason I suggested your taking the precaution I have outlined. May I suggest, too, that you make haste. There is no telling what minute Mr. Veritzen will telephone, you know."

I put my hand upon the telephone and drew it toward me, but even before I took off the receiver it rang shrilly, and Hugh took the instrument from me in order to answer the call.

A CALL FROM VERITZEN

"Yes," he said, and then, after a second, "she is right here."

He handed the telephone to me with a whispered comment:

"Your friend at the exchange has even more sense than the amount with which we credited her," he said, and I took over the instrument with a lively curiosity.

"Mrs. Graham?" the pleasant voice of the operator asked, and when I had acknowledged my identity she went on rapidly.

"I have a long distance call for you from New York, a particular person call, so no one but you will do. I knew that you had just called New York from The Larches, and I thought perhaps you had not yet gone home. 'It won't do any harm to try The Larches,' I said to myself. I hope you don't mind."

"Mind!" I told her warmly. "Instead, I am very grateful. Do you know the name of the person calling?"

"Mr. Veritzen," she said. Mr. Philip Veritzen. Shall I put him on the wire?"

"Please!"

"Mrs. Graham! Is this you?"

"Yes. Mr. Veritzen?"

"Yes, yes," impatiently. "Please do not be annoyed if I question you rather strenuously, but I have a nasty mess on my hands which must be cleared up at once. First, may I ask you, have you seen Miss Avis Arlen today?"

"Why, yes," I told him. "I left her only a couple of hours ago."

"Where did you see her?"

"At the railroad station at Patchogue." If he were going to cross-examine me as if I were a witness in a criminal trial, I told myself hotly, I would give him as much trouble as possible.

"Whose suggestion was it that you meet there?"

"Mine."

"May I ask why?" The voice icy now.

"Because I did not wish her to come to the farm, as she proposed doing." My own voice also held the suggestion of icicles in the offing.

SUSPECTS AVIS ARLEN

"Did she give any explanation of why she wanted to come to the farm?"

"Not when she telephoned to make the appointment," I told him truthfully. "She just said that it was most necessary that she see me, and that she would like to come to the farm, returning tonight, as she had to be at work in the morning."

"Did she sound as if she were frightened?"

"Oh, no, indeed!" I fibbed promptly. "She sounded a little upset, but that was explained by what she told me when I met her at Patchogue."

"Why did you not permit her to come to the farm?"

"Because I did not wish to have Mary upset upon the eve of her wedding," I returned coolly. "She and Miss Arlen loathe each other. I did not wish them to have an interview unless I knew what it was all about."

"Will you please tell me what she told you when you saw her at Patchogue?"

With a prayer that Avis Arlen's memory would gibe with mine, I gave him the alibi which we had prepared for the girl. When I had finished there was a long silence, then a sardonic chuckle.

"Mrs. Graham, you are the cleverest woman I know, but I'd like to go back of those returns. May I see you tonight, if I motor out now?"

Delicacies Can Be Stocked on Shelf

By Martha Lee

IN THE average household, every member has a favorite niche or corner that to him is most important. It may be the soft chair for Dad, the cellar for Bob or the attic for Babs . . . but to Mother it is the extra shelf where she can put her dishes, extra food supplies, linens and glasses . . . and if it isn't hoping for too much, she has that saver-of-situations . . . the emergency shelf.

Lady, can you spare a shelf? If you can, then you have all the makings of the emergency shelf. You, too, can point with pride to your foresight and resourcefulness when that bugaboo, the Unexpected Guest, appears.

You know how it usually happens. You have just settled down to the latest book-of-the month when the doorbell suddenly rings. And then you start worrying what to serve the Unex. Gu.

It is so easy to clear off a shelf right now and put in a stock of staples. And, whatever happens, don't yield to the temptation of sneaking off a can now and then without replacing it. Always have a full stock.

FOR THE UNEXPECTED LADY GUEST

Tunafish, devilled chicken, sardines, baked beans, olives, anchovies, rolled and filets, fruit salad, tomato juice cocktail, maraschino cherries, cream of mushroom soup, sweet pickle relish, evaporated milk, sweetened condensed milk, crispy crackers, Dutch rusk, butter crackers.

FOR THE UNEXPECTED MAN GUEST

Chicken and noodle dinners, bloaters, crabmeat, salmon, corned beef hash, sauerkraut juice, dill pickles, canned pineapple, spaghetti and tomato sauce, pineapple juice, tomato soup, anchovy paste, pretzels, cheese crackers.

(P. S.—And when the Unexpected Guest does arrive, may we show you how to prepare a rather substantial meal or a hurried snack by using a menu incorporating the foods on your Emergency Shelf?)

EMERGENCY MENUS FOR THE UNEXPECTED LADY GUEST

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Butter Crackers
Baked Bean Cutlets
Sweet Pickle Relish
Cookies Tea

THE UNEXPECTED MAN GUEST

Tailored and Trim

By MARIAN MARTIN

If you are the trim rather than the fluffy type, here is your gown! Or maybe you are the sort of person who just has trim days and fluffy days, it amounts to the same thing. This is a frock in which you will always look well dressed and well groomed. It fits . . . beautifully! The pattern attends to that . . . among other things! The diagonal closing is extremely effective . . . marked by buttons which emphasize its chic. The long slashed shoulders look like pert little sleeves.

Pattern 9007 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

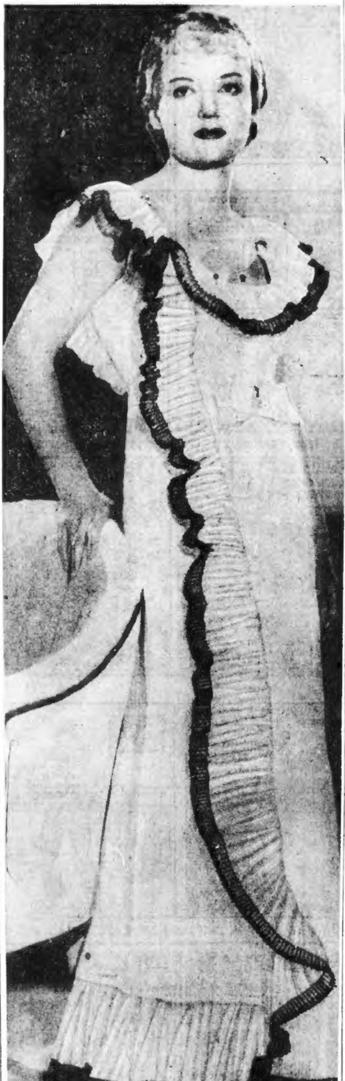
Flutter of Black Lace on White



IN the tantalizing way of its Andalusian-dancer inspiration, black lace, shadow-delicate and finely pleated, will sway on the ruffles that circle the shoulders and swing around the hem of an embroidered organdie frock. Or you might fall a willing victim to the strawberry pink organdie with black lace. A Boston shop has an exact copy of this demure-siren frock originally worn by the actress, Dorothy Tree. For further information, phone Annice Brink, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Showering' the Bride

By Mrs. Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. A friend and I had an argument which I would like you to settle. A says that it is proper for a sister to give her bride-to-be sister a shower. B says that it is not; "that it's begging for gifts." We have had a heated argument about this, and would like you to settle it for us.

T.

1. I wish that I could "settle this argument," for it is one of the most frequently arising questions in the world of good form. But there aren't any definite rules about the giving of showers, and we are left to settle every question about them according to our innate sense of good form and our own common sense. The usual custom is for a group of girls who are close friends of the bride-to-be—the members of her club, for instance—to plan a shower for her. Certainly no one could criticize this friendly gesture.

Emerald Isle Influence

THERE'S a movement afoot, possibly sponsored by the sons of the Emerald Isle, to launch green as the leading fashion color for late summer and fall.

And from the looks of things, the idea is finding enthusiastic supporters among both stylists and customers.

After an epidemic of summer prints in the almost universal color combinations of either navy and white, black and white or red and white, the appearance of a crop of new green and white printed frocks is hailed with joy.

It is a dark, bottle green that is combined with white in these new and cool-looking dresses for summer, and the color scheme is seen in costumes for both daytime and evening wear.

CAST INTO EDEN

Linda Finds Her Dress Has Been Mysteriously Stolen

By Henry C. Rowland

SYNOPSIS

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a wealthy society girl, named Linda, are guests aboard the yacht owned by the millionaire, Thomas Tucker, anchored at San Cristobal. Jerome and Linda are bored with each other and when the other guests go ashore, the young couple, each believing the other had gone, stays on board. One of the sailors contracts fever and the yacht is quarantined. No one is allowed to come aboard or leave. But Jerome and Linda escape in a skiff. Approaching an island, the boat strikes a coral reef and starts to sink. Jerome throws the motor overboard and manages to make shore.

CHAPTER IV

"This just about caps the whole silly business," Linda said.

"Yes," Jerome agreed. "You insist on beating it rather than be quarantined with me aboard the yacht, and now it looks like you're getting marooned with me on a desert island."

"For how long?"

"Until somebody passes this way or I can patch the leak and go out and haul up the engine."

"Will it run?"

"If not on bottom too long. Besides we've got sail.'"

"What about water?"

"The boat breaker's filled and there's a case of mineral."

"All the same it's not so hot."

"It needn't be so bad if we can live in peace." He looked at the beach. "The tide's nearly gone. There isn't much fall but enough for me to get at her. I can stop the hole somehow so she ought to float."

He had saved the anchor and line enough to carry it above high water mark.

Linda walked off down the beach without answering. A gust of anger swept over Jerome. He had intended to explore the place with her but now decided to get to work on the boat. It was not hard to roll on its beam ends in the water.

He drove one of the oars into the sand with a block of coquina stone, made fast the end of a halyard to it, then hove the boat down by hauling the halyard through the sheave let into the mast head, rolling the splintered strake clear of the water.

BOAT PLANKS SMASHED

Two of the cedar planks were smashed in raggedly for about three feet of their length, and one of the frames was broken. It would have been a repair job of about an hour in a shipyard. Even here Jerome could have cut out the plank and pieced it neatly enough with proper material and tools. He wanted first to retrieve the engine and as the quickest way of doing so cut a big square from the canvas cockpit cover and hauled this snugly over the ragged tear in the boat's bilge, securing it on either side in the fashion of a "collision mat."

This snug corset proved enough to keep the water out except for a little seepage, as the skiff was carvel built with a smooth outer skin.

Jerome worked rapidly, expecting Linda to return at any moment. As she did not, he rowed off and hauled up the engine, the exhaust of which he had plugged. The boat proved tighter than he could have hoped and he decided that his collision mat should be enough to get them safely to the mainland. He worked some few minutes at the engine before getting it to run.

The noise of the exhaust ought certainly to bring Linda hurrying back, he thought. Besides, she must be hungry. As the minutes passed, with still no sign of her, Jerome's irritation changed to anxiety. He had stripped off his outer clothes and spread them to dry before starting to work, and without waiting to put them on he set off down the beach in sport shirt and shorts, and barefooted, to look for her. The tide was coming by this time, and Jerome, as a sailor, naturally made fast the grapnel line and carried the little, brightly galvanized hook some distance ashore.

The beach was crescent shaped and smooth for about a furlong, when it was broken by outcropping ledges of coral and coquina that ran out at right angles to it. These recurring intercepted an extended view of the shore. Higher up, the sand was deep and fine to a fringe of palms flanked by dense jungle of which the trees were sometimes large. Patches of vivid green indicated the island to be well watered with marshy spots.

LINDA DEAR TO HIM

Jerome's anxiety and exasperation increased as he hurried along. It was as if a child in his care had run away to spite him because he had reproved her, and run possibly into unknown danger. He would not have admitted that Linda was dear to him, but he was conscious of a mixed desire to clasp her in his arms on finding her safe and sound and then whip her soundly for the fright that her willfulness was causing him. Fond parents have sometimes felt the same under similar conditions.

He came to the coral ledge that cut across the beach and clambered over it, wishing that he had waited to put on his shoes. Beyond was a sandy little cove and farther on a broken formation of other straggling ledges. Between them were clear deep pools of aquamarine. Jerome thought of barracuda and octopoda and sharks and stingrays. Goose-creeps rippled down his spine. He could not understand why Linda should have wondered so far, and one would have expected her to return on hearing the engine firing.

Then his eye was caught by a swiftly moving object that appeared to scurry into the jungle behind a low flattened ledge about two hundred yards ahead of him. It looked to be some sort of small animal but Jerome could not be sure how much of its bulk had been visible as it projected above the rock rim. Then farther down he had a glimpse of another that disappeared in the same baffling way.

These animals did not correspond to any creature he could think of that was apt to be on such an island. They were not goats nor hogs. He hurried on, curious to see what the tracks might reveal, but when he came to the spot where he had seen the first there were no tracks. Only naked rocks. The same was true of the second.

He crossed a short strip of beach and came to another ledge that thrust out. The water on this lee side of the island was smooth except for a low wash. Jerome peered over the top of the low ledge. A few yards away he saw Linda sitting with her hands clasped under her bent knees. She had taken off her dress and had on only the sheer slip under it. This was wet and clinging to her.

He called, "Linda!"

She answered angrily, "Bring back my dress."

"Dress? What are you talking about?"

"Bring back my dress, you bozo!"

He ignored her scanty slip and his own undress and waded round the ledge. Linda did not seem to care. She was too angry.

"What's the idea? Give me my dress. You must have gone cuckoo."

"I don't know anything about your dress. Do you think I'd choose this time for little pranks? Or any other of that kind?"

"My dress is gone, and my shoes and stockings. I spread them out to dry."

She saw then that he was surprised and startled.

"There must be somebody on this rotten island, Jerry."

"I saw two moving objects sneaking into the bush, but they weren't men."

"Well, what were they? What sort of animal would run off with my clothes.

"Nothing I can think of. They'd scarcely be monkeys off here."

She looked frightened for the first time since they'd started. To reassure her he said, "I patched the boat and went out and retrieved the engine. Let's go back and shove off."

"Will she keep afloat?"

"Yes. Enough to reach the mainland. We may have to bail. And we've got to eat."

Linda sprang up. "That can wait 'till we get going. This place gives me the creeps. I'm not easily scared. Scram!"

EERIE CRY AGAIN

They started back. As they crossed the strip of beach there came from the jungle an eerie cry. It was guttural and at the same time shrill and it ended in a mocking jabber. Linda gripped his arm. "What was that?"

"Don't know. Don't care for it, either."

They hurried on. It became apparent then that a creature of some sort was moving parallel to them hidden in the scrub, for they could hear a crackling and rustling at intervals.

They came to a low rocky point that jutted out and behind which the crescent beach where they had landed curved away so as to be hidden until they had rounded the intervening ledge.

"Look," Linda wailed.

Jerome had already seen the boat about a quarter of a mile out from the beach. A breeze had sprung up off the sea on the other side of the island and the boat was by this time in the zone of rippling water drifting rapidly away. Even a strong swimmer like either of them could not hope to overtake it.

Linda said chokingly, "Now we are done in. Couldn't you have made her fast? You lubber of a Sunday picknicker!"

"She was made fast. I carried the anchor up the beach."

"Then you forgot to make the end of the line fast."

"I didn't forget to make it fast. Somebody or something cast it off."

"Why should anybody want to do a thing like that? It doesn't make any sense."

He responded angrily. "Neither does your straying off half a mile down the shore and making me leave the boat to go after you. Why didn't you come back when you heard the engine?"

"I didn't hear the engine. The waves were splashing against the rocks. Where's all the stuff we threw out on the beach?"

"I slung it all back into the boat . . ."

New Cream Mask Has Amazing Effect on Overworked or Freckled Skin

POSED BY PAT PATTERSON

By Juliet Shelby

SO MUCH OF ONE'S NATURE, character and personality are judged by the hands! Yet most of us give them the minimum amount of care and take them quite for granted.

Your hands should be beautiful. They should express through their beauty your finest thoughts and the meticulousness of your nature. Every little movement a hand makes reveals the amount of care you give it—and too, too frequently it reveals only neglect.

Thorough scrubbings with a brush and soap are very essential, and after each washing a soothing lotion should be applied. A manicure once a week (which you can give yourself with a daily touching up of the nails, will keep the hands looking nicely groomed.

But don't stop there! The skin of the hand should be as pampered as the skin of the face. Its texture must be smooth and lovely, to be beautiful. There is a new hand mask cream which serves as a skin bleach and softener. You rub it on before you dress in the evening and let it remain for a few minutes while you relax, as you would in applying a mask to your face, then remove it with any good cleansing lotion and rub in a bit of hand cream.

While it is on your skin you can actually feel it going deep into the pores and soothing the tired muscles. The longer you keep it on the skin, the better work it can do. It's a great boon to women who freckle easily, or whose blood circulation is poor.

If you are interested you may learn the name of this new hand mask cream and where it can be bought in Boston by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston, or phoning Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000.

Gray Hair Care

Question: I am twenty-five years old and my hair is already quite gray. Is it possible for the natural color of the hair to be restored without resorting to artificial methods?

H. G. Brockton.

Answer: It is quite possible for you to restore the natural color to your hair. It will take time, of course, but by watching your diet and keeping your scalp well stimulated, and your hair well brushed, new hair will come in of your natural shade. Do resist using hair dyes. A henna rinse is the safest and most effective.

Tweezers for Facial Hair

Question: Will you please tell me how I can get rid of the hair on my face? Although there isn't much, it is very noticeable. I have tried bleaching, but it doesn't seem to help. What can I do to lighten the hair on my legs and arms? Jane L., Dover.

Answer: If the hair on your face is not thick and if bleaching it has not been successful, I suggest that you pull out each hair with a pair of tweezers.

Ways of Winning Slam Doubles

By Josephine Culbertson

The Lead-Direct Double of a Slam bid has been discussed in these columns on numerous occasions. We all know the Double of a Slam contract by the partner of the Opening leader is made not in an effort to pick up a paltry additional 50 or 100 points, but is made in an attempt to direct the Opening lead. If the player who doubles has previously bid a suit, he is asking his partner not to open that suit. If there has been no bidding by the defending side, the Double commands an unnatural or unusual Opening. Sometimes the Double is made because the Doubler is void of a certain suit.

At other times the Double is made because the Doubler has strength in one of the suits bid by Dummy, and a lead through that suit seems imperative. On still other occasions the Double is made to tell the Opening leader to open a singleton of his own because the player who has doubled has the Ace of trumps and can surely give him a ruff. Naturally, there are many occasions when the analytical ability of the partner of the Doubler is taxed to the utmost to decide just what Opening is desired.

Today's hand is a case in point.
East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J ♡ Q J 10 5 ◇ Q 10 7 6 5 ♣ 10 7 4
♠ 8 ♡ A ◇ J 8 4 3 ♣ K Q J 8 6 5 3	North West East South	♠ K Q 9 7 ♡ K 7 6 2 ◇ A K 9 2 ♣ A
	♠ A 10 6 5 4 3 2 ♡ 9 8 4 3 ◇ — ♣ 9 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 NT	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

The bidding by East and West was more or less normal. Certainly the contract of six clubs should be made easily. At any rate, North was faced with the question of an opening lead. After his partner's double he immediately abandoned the idea of making the normal lead of the heart queen, and he also decided against a trump opening.

This left the choice between a spade and a diamond. A spade lead would be made in the hope that South had doubled on the Ace of spades and could give North a ruff on the second round. The diamond lead would be made in an effort to give South a ruff, and South would be expected to have the second or setting trick in one of the other suits. After quite a bit of thought, the North player finally decided on the correct opening—a diamond—whereupon his partner ruffed and cashed the Ace of spades for the setting trick.

His reasoning was as follows: East had opened the bidding with one spade and had never rebid the suit, and furthermore West had never supported it. What possible reason, therefore, could South have—holding a long spade suit headed by the Ace—to believe that North had a singleton and that West would have to follow to the suit twice? In other words, the mere possession of the spade Ace, even with a five, six or seven card suit, would give South no reason to believe he could defeat the hand and no reason to try to command a spade opening. Therefore, it would appear that South must have doubled because of a void in diamonds, and that a diamond lead would give him a first round ruff.

It is true that East had bid diamonds only once and West had not supported that suit. However, the West player, who did not force on the first round, immediately became excited when his partner bid two diamonds, and jumped the bidding on the second round, thereby indicating some sort of diamond fit.

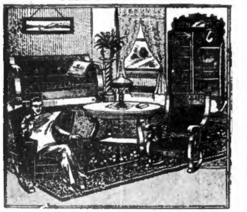
KEYHOLE GLIMPSES INTO THE HOME LIVES OF FILM CELEBRITIES



Today my Candid Camera gives you the truth about the home life of Hollywood. Here we see Clark Barrymore, after a hard day at the Studio. Hereafter, when anyone says that these friendly, unspoiled people live riotous, unrestrained lives, you can snap your fingers and exclaim, "Nerts, they're just folks, like you and me, who got where they are by study and hard work."

As a matter of fact, all the stars devote every minute they can spare to helping humanity. For instance, "C. B.", as we who know him have come to call him is not as you might suppose wasting his time with the Daily Racing Form. He is studying his thesis which he will read before the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. In the thesis he solves the censorship problem by suggesting that anyone who doesn't like this or that scene can impose a voluntary censorship by closing his eyes tight.

By the way, do not fail to see this lovable man's next picture, in which he enacts a thrilling scene when he accidentally sits down on a third rail.

It's sometimes hard to tell which is the most annoying—the way this country's saddled with debt or the way it's unhorsed by debtors.

Boston Redskin Blast Back at New Yorkers Over Danowski Case ↑ The Judge Landis Mystery; Red Sox ↓ Patch Backstop

By AUSTEN LAKE

MR. DINNY SHEA, a brotherly little man who ordinarily goes around blessing people through his horn rims, is the home secretary, publicity tub-thumper and greeter for the Boston Redskins pro football company.

Austen Lake

Just now Mr. Dinny Shea is churning up a very creamy lather over the injustice being done to the Redskins' side of the Danowski case. You recall how the Fordham halfback, a 190-pound line pulverizer, was picked right out of the Redskins' pocket by some nifty finger work by the New York Giants footballers.

So this morning, early, Mr. Shea, supported ably by the three-eighths Sioux Indian, Mr. "Lone Star" Dietz, calls around with pink cheeks and a bright eye, to see honor satisfied. And the story he tells is oneof conniving, though that is not his word.

The Redskins, says Mr. Shea, signed Danowski last winter, thereby chagrining the New York Giants, who wanted him too And presently there comes to the office of Joe Carr, president of the National Football League, a plaintive letter from the Fordham athletic board, aying that Danowski would be ineligible for spring sports if the contract was not revoked.

So, generously, the Redskins void the document. "And then the Giants signs him last month," sobbed Mr. Dinny Shea, who goes on to remark that "the strongest disinfectant cannot banish the fetid odor pervading the transaction." Which is the purest Shea rhetoric.

"EVERY CLUB in the league," inserted Deitz, "signs players during the winter, or before they are graduated. Furthermore, Danowski did not take part in any spring sports at Fordham."

Mr. Dinny Shea huffed his throat passage clear and said, "And that is a point which takes the shine off the aureole of virtue gracing the dome of the Giants' head."

"How does George Marshall feel about this?" I asked Mr. Dinny Shea.

"George's heart is much harder than it was before this Danowski imbroglio," said he, "and keen will be the touch, henceforth, that pierces its callous exterior."

From which I gather Marshall is in a hard-boiled state of mind.

"Hard-boiled," snorted Mr. Shea, "is not the word. He has, at the moment, a duralumin casing, a veritable armor shell, about his heart that cannot be penetrated with an ice pick."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the high commissioner of organized baseball? In late months, even years, one seldom hears of the judge, or ever sees his silvered head.

Which is not the normal Landis manner. One recalls how the judge used to stamp around shaking his tangled white plume and jabbing with his long finger. He affected all the hammy externals of a spread eagle congressman of the Joe Cannon era, including baggy knees, a common people's hat and a piercing glare.

I hear, round about, that he is going to be present at the All-Star game next week. The item carrying the news is only one line, instead of the factory whistle blurbs that used to be broadcast whenever he moved around.

The judge was sick last winter, and he may be building up pressure now by lying low. But in any case he has let his character as baseball's czar slip of late, and it is time he freshened up his role by letting off a few curly wolf howls and snatching somebody baldheaded.

THE RED SOX PARK crew is taking down their backstop screen next Monday in the hope of shrinking the net chords to prevent foul balls from squeezing through and popping folk on the top of the head.

The screen was originally bought for $450 from Howard Ehmke, old Red Sox pitcher, who has gone into the waterproof cover and backstop net business. But since it was put in place this spring, fully a hundred fouls have broken through the net.

YOU MIGHT EXPECT the only brother battery in the major leagues, the Ferrell boys, Wesley and Rick, to be a fraternal and loving combination when they are working together. But the opposite is the case. Rick snarls at Wes, and Wes yammers back at Rick, possibly because each demands a high standard of performance from his father's son.

IN CHOOSING Casey Stengel, along with Bill McKechnie, to be assistant managers of the National League All-Star team, Bill Terry, who is usually a frigid man and not inclined to woo favor, has soothed Brooklyn feelings for the pre-season remark he made about the Dodgers.

"Oh! Is that club still in the league?" Bill remarked, after Stengel and Quinn made some hopeful predictions about their team.

During the first half of the season, whenever the Dodgers played the Giants, Stengel has lost no opportunity to stick verbal hat pins into Terry as he passed in front of the latter's dugout And Terry always retorted in kind. Yet today Terry says, "Stengel has earned the honor of being among the All-Stars."

HARDEST MAN in the major leagues to interview is Brick Owen, the boulder-chinned umpire. Brick's replies are limited to a range of three words, "Nope," "Yeh" and "Oke" . . . Judge Emil Fuchs, Braves prexy, says that young Elbert Fletcher, former Milton High athlete and now blazing a wide trail with the Harrisburg team, will be drawn back to the Boston club for late season service . . . England is regaining lost prestige in her own home sports, so long monopolised by Americans and Australians Lately she recovered the "ashes of cricket" at Lord's. More recently Harold Cotton, a home-bred, won the British Open's silver ice pitcher back from American custody. And Friday Fred Perry, a native, beat Jack Crawford of Australia in the Wimbledon singles, the first time in 25 years that an Englishman has won the superlative British tennis event.

Brilliant Brookline Mermaid Rules Waves as Diving Queen

Miss Esther Morrison, who has held the N. E. diving crown for almost nine years, thrilled the summer vacationers at Talliwood Lake, near Winthrop, Me., yesterday in diving competition with outstanding swimmers from various parts of this section of the country. Here is Miss Morrison executing a difficult dive from the low board.

Mermaids Vie for N.E. Crowns

Talliwood, Maranacook, Me., July 7—Competitive events in the three-day meet of the Boston Swimming Association under the direction of Ben Levias will start today after a brilliant introductory program of exhibition events yesterday witnessed by a big crowd including Governor Louis Brann of this state

Hundreds of noted enthusiasts crowded the green shores of Maranacook lake to witness the exhibitions in which Alice Bridges nationally prominent mermaid came within one-fifth of a second of breaking her New England senior 100 meters free-style record

Alice came from third place close at the half way mark to pass Betty Morgan, also of Whitinsville, and then forged ahead of her sister, Marguerite, to win

Upon emerging from the water the queen of New England aquatics was congratulated by Governor Brann who is here "to watch a real take-in" as His Honor expressed it

Incidentally it was a welcome back by the Governor to the Bridges twins, for it was 17 years ago that the girls were born in Waterville

Lillian Davis of the Boston Swimming Association was first in the 100-meter backstroke edging out Mildred Toomey and Barbara May Elinor Bloomquist of the Providence Swimming Club fought gamely in the 100-meter breast stroke but was forced into second place by Frances Ivas of the B S A

"One-Eye" Connelly, who for years has been a "gate crasher," received a surprise when he sauntered up to the athletic grounds and learned that admission was not required. This was his first attendance at a swimming meet.

The summaries:

100-Meter Back Stroke Invitation—Won by Lillian Davis, B. S. A.; Mildred Toomey, B. S. A., second; Barbara May, B. S. A., third. Time—1 min. 32 sec.

100-Meter Free Style—Won by Alice Bridges, Whitinsville A. C.; Marguerite Bridges, second; Betty Morgan, Whitinsville A. C., third. Time—1 min. 12 secs.

100-Meter Breast Stroke—Won by Frances Ivas, B. S. A.; Elinor Bloomquist, Providence, second; Margaret Lynch, B. S. A., third. Time—1 min. 53 secs.

50-Meter Free Style—Won by Mildred Twomey, B. S. A.; Elinor Weeke, B. S. A., second; Mildred Mcglynn, B. S. A., third. Time—38 secs.

OFFERS PERRY $25,000 TO TURN PRO

By Paul Gardner

Universal Service

New York, July 7—Fred Perry winner of the 1934 Wimbledon championship, was today cabled an offer of $25,000 to turn tennis professional, by Bill O'Brien, manager of William T. Tilden, 2nd.

O'Brien offered Perry a percentage option in his terms which extend over a four-month period The American promoter has been after Perry ever since Ellsworth Vines former American titlist, took to the money game and earned some [illegible] like $60,000 since the first of the year

"I expect to get Perry," O'Bren said tonight. "Especially if the British team loses out in the Davis cup play . . . Perry, as you know is the greatest amateur in the world . . . He is the American champion, the Australian and now the English. And yet Vines has beaten him more often than he has Vines. There would be a sell-out in every city in the country to see this fellow play Vines.

"If Frank Shields reaches the finals of the American play at Forest Hills this September and Perry will not come with us we are very much interested in Shields. He is the No. 1 American at present and the only other man who can really challenge him is Sidney Wood and Wood will not become a professional."

SOX PITCHERS STYMIE A'S SLUGGERS

By Joe Cashman

Red Sox pitchers most certainly aren't the best in the land, but they're succeeding admirably where most rival staffs have failed miserably in silencing the big siege guns of the Athletics, Jimmy Foxx and Bob Johnson

These guns had been booming so loudly and hitting the target so often that each of the Mackian sluggers came here with 24 home runs to his credit, which gave them a lead of three over the rest of the field

Today however finds Lou Gehrig of the Yanks sharing the top in the round-tripper race as a result of hitting three in the past two afternoons while Foxx and Johnson have been unable to get the ball out of the infield against the Fenway flingers

First-sacker Jimmy walked in the first frame of the opening tilt Since then he has been to bat eight times and every time he hit the [illegible], he was tossed out by either Bill Werber or Lyn Lary He's splashed into one twin-killing and fanned twice.

THOSE COLLEGIANS

Leftfielder Bob has succeeded in getting three singles, but they were all scratch blows that he beat out He, too, has been whiffed twice.

So, if you're within hearing distance of the Quaker pair at the Fens during the next two afternoons, you'd be wise to keep silent about the ineffectiveness of "Bucky Harris' hurlers

If you must criticize hurlers take a few slams at the visiting slabmen. We doubt that anybody will take issue. Certainly, they won't if they saw Friday's contest

So in the order named, appeared "Lefty" Flohr from Duke, Vernon Wilshere, another southpaw, from Indiana, and, finally, Ed Lagger, a right hander from Northwestern

Broaca is one in a hundred and the Macks have three of the other ninety-nine in Flohr, Wilshere and Lagger.

Flohr showed up in the fourth and first of all inquired what he should do while he has the ball in his hand on the hill and sees a runner stealing a base. He found out, but not before Morgan had pilfered the sack.

Miss Round Beats Helen Jacobs, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3

By Associated Press

Wimbledon, Eng., July 7—Helen Hull Jacobs, twice a finalist but never a winner of the most prized title in tennis, again was turned back today in her bid for the women's singles crown of the all-England championships by Dorothy Round, ranking English player, who defeated her 6-2, 5-7, 6-3, in the final round.

It was a heartbreaking setback for the American girl, who was a finalist against her fellow Californian, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in 1929 and 1932

This year with Mrs. Moody a spectator Helen had hopes that she at last would ascend to the throne the great women tennis players of the world since 1884 had ruled

SWEEP FOR BRITISH

The victory for Miss Round made it an English sweep of the two main titles and the first victory for an Englishwoman since 1926 when Mrs Kitty McKane [illegible] won

It was the first time since 1909 that England had won both titles Ryan, former Californian now living in London, and Mme Rene Mathieu, of France, won the All-England Women's Doubles Tennis title for the second successive time defeating Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Ct., and Mme Jung Henrotin also of France, 6-3, 6-3 in the final round

It was the 19th Wimbledon Doubles title for Miss Ryan, and further strengthened her claim to the title of the world's greatest woman's doubles player

BRAVES - PHILS IN TWIN-BILL

Philadelphia, July 7—The Braves and Phillies renew their series here today with a double-header at Baker Bowl, and the baseball writers are all set to cover the games with adding machines as well as typewriters

The two games played in this series found the Phils winning the first 14-11 and the Braves taking the second, 16-13 Scoreless and hitless innings have been missing almost entirely in this series, as the teams put on wild conglomerations of hits, runs and errors

The Braves will try to put a stop to the slugging Phils with the curve-ball artist, Fred Frankhouse and their ace of last season Ben Cantwell, while Austin Moore and Si Johnson will be the likely nominations for hurling assignments by Manager Jimmy Wilson

TIGER COACH BEATEN IN SCULLS

Henley-on Thames, Eng., July 7 (AP)—Princeton University's varsity eight-oared crew today failed in a gallant bid for the grand challenge cup, most highly prized trophy at stake in the Royal Henley Regatta, losing by three-quarters of a length to the powerful Leander Rowing Club of London. Leander rowed the Henley distance in 6 minutes, 45 seconds, only one second short of the course record it set yesterday

By Associated Press

Henley-on-Thames, Eng., July 7 Dr. Herbert Buhtz of Berlin today won the diamond sculls defeating Winthrop (Bill) Rutherfurd, former Princeton varsity oarsman, by three and a half lengths in eight minutes ten seconds to tie the record for the mile 550 yards set by F. S. Kelly in 1905.

The red headed German, a magnificently proportioned athlete was five seconds under Kelly's record at the half way mark which he made in 3:50 but with the race won he slowed down near the finish to just miss a new markk for the event

Previous to the diamond sculls final won only once by an American by W. M. Hoover in 1922 the German team of H. Braun and H. G. Moller won the silver goblets in double sculls by one-quarter length from the Pieland brothers of the Royal Chester Club. Their time was 8:09 one second over the record made in 1911

Buhtz jumped away to an early lead as Rutherfurd almost swung into a boom in a ragged start

The German was leading by a length at the half mile and had increased it to two as the mile marker was passed Rutherfurd unloosed a sprint there, raising his stroke to 32 as the German held to a steady 28 and he crept up slightly.

Braves and Sox Farmhands Reap Harvest in Minors

By JOE CASHMAN

Latest minor league averages reveal that Red Sox and Braves optioned players are developing quite satisfactorily. Mel Almada is hitting .350, Al Niemic is batting .321 George Stumpf is in the select circle and "Lefty" Hockette leads the American Association in number of victories with 11. All four are in Kansas City with Fenway strings attached.

Somerville Arthur "Skinny" Graham, Red Sox property with Reading, is the second leading hitter in the New York-Penn. League with a mark of .398. Elbert Fletcher of Milton Boston Evening American's gift to the Braves, hasn't been at the Tribe's Harrisburg farm long enough to break into the records, but last week he was to bat 20 times and smashed out 10 hits for an average of a cool .500.

The Red Sox have decided to play a doubleheader with the Athletics tomorrow afternoon.

Both the Sox and the Braves have exhibition games carded for Monday. The Sox will go to Brockton, and the Tribe will make its annual appearance at Malden.

The ladies at Friday's tilt at the Fens numbered 4100 and the cash customers were announced as 3636. The management generously opened the first-base pavilion to the bleacherites because of the heat. Some 40 sun-gods refused the invitation to sit in the shade.

When Billy Werber was ruled out trying to stretch his third-inning drive off the scoreboard into a double, he emerged from the tangle with "Rabbit" Warstler with the ball in his hand.

No better proof could have been offered that Warstler had dropped the ball, but Owen refused to reverse his ruling until he had conferred with Umpire-in-chief Summers.

Werber again stood out over the highly-touted "Pinkey" Higgins of the A's, getting four hits and a walk and scoring five runs, as well as making a flock of miracle plays in the field.

Seven runs in the first inning enabled the lowly Reds to nose out the Cards, 16 to 15.

American Leaguers 7-10 Favorites

By Universal Service

St. Louis, July 7—The American League all-stars are 7 to 10 favorites to win from the National League all-stars in the game at New York next Tuesday.

"I figure that Gomez will pitch for the American League team and Hubbell for the Nationals," said Kearney. "The Americans went to the post favorite last year and won. I figure they'll do it again this year."

Kearney also volunteered that he believes the World Series this season will be staged in New York between the Giants and the Yankees.

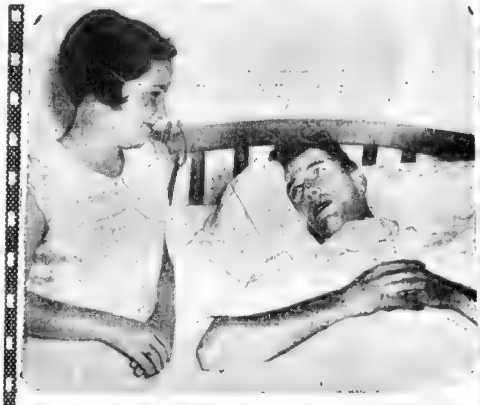
Bad, Bad Tonsils Laid 'Lefty' Low



"Lefty" Grove is cheered by his daughter Doris as he rests at St. Elizabeth's Hospital following the removal of his tonsils. The operation, "Lefty" hopes, will help him regain his pitching effectiveness. Earlier in the season he had abcessed teeth extracted.

Acrobat Wrestles Medico at Revere

Another outdoor wrestling show is on the calendar for the cycle track at Revere Monday night. The main bout will be a battle for the New England middleweight championship between Doc Louis Altshuler, Jewish sensation, and Louis Foote of Salem, former circus acrobat.

In a 30-minute semifinal bout Lloyd Stewart of Lynn will meet Eddie Adams of Worcester. Both [illegible] from the start. The preliminary bouts and a battle royal are also on the card.

Garden, Arena Merge

According to well founded reports, the amalgamation of the Boston Garden and the Boston Arena, rival sport emporiums, will be announced early next week.

It is understood that Henry G. Lapham will become president and major stock-holder in the new organization. Negotiations with Lapham, N. Y. Madison Square Garden and Boston & Maine railroad officials and Charles F. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins in conclave, have been going on for some time.

Frank Parker in Clay Court Win

Chicago, July 7—Frankie Parker vs. Donald Budge and Gene Mako vs. Bryan "Bitsy" Grant will be the semifinals in the national clay court semifinal tennis tournament today.

Parker beat Robert Bryan, 3—6, 6—0, 6—3, 7—5, and Mako defeated Henry Prusoff, 9—11, 5—7, 6—0, 6—1, 9—7, to join Grant and Budge in the semifinals.

*Chandler	15	23

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Filene's 5½, Jordan Marsh ½.
Conrad 5½, White ½.
Slattery 4, Sears, Roebuck 2.
Hovey 3½, Shepard 2½.
*One match less than others.

By Bill Grimes

During the eighth round of the Retail Stores Four Ball League matches at the W[illegible] Golf Club [illegible] Conrad & Co. turned on the heat to such an extent as to take five and one-half points each from Jordan Marsh and R. H. White Co. respectively.

Fortunately for Jordan Marsh, the Filene aggregation was trailing six and one-half points going into the fray. Otherwise, Captain Rud Dodge and his cohorts might have surrendered possession of first place.

BLISTERING TEAM

Anytime the Filene's team gets hot, it blisters its opponents. At South Shore, during the annual Retail Trade Board tournament Filene's crushed Conrad under a similar defeat to that which they hung on Jordan Marsh at Wollaston.

Jack McCarthy and Jack Egan corralled three points from Rud Dodge and Mark Troy. McCarthy and Egan were two up at the turn and one up for the inward nine. McCarthy put together a pair of 36s for a par 72 which included 5s at the 4th and 10th, where he was trapped at three putts on the 3d and 18th greens.

McCarthy had an eagle at the long 5th where he [illegible] a 3[illegible] footer for a three and birdies at the 9th, 14th and 15th.

In the other Filene's-Jordan match, Tony Pierre proved a stiff opponent for George Saxe and Dick Ruggles.

Pierre all but upset the works by winning the 1st, 4th and 9th holes, two with birdies, going out, and although Fred Bradley's stroke won the 17th to square the match for the inward holes and his net three at the home hole split the point, Pierre was also a factor coming home.

MOVING UP

Conrad & Co., the dark horse, moved right up within hailing distance of Jordan Marsh and Filene's by tipping over R. H. White Co. for five and one-half points. John Co[illegible]roy's net deuce at the home hole prevented Conrad making a clean sweep. Rich Wagner, who played with Dave Moeser, carded a 39—38—77, to take three points from Meisenbach and Crafts.

Conrad is scheduled to play off its postponed Sears, Roebuck match at Weston on Monday and, if Dave Moeser and his charges are clicking as they were against White's, there is a possibility that Filene's will be dropped out of second place.

E. T. Slattery & Co. packed too many guns for Sears, Roebuck, taking four out of six points, while C. F. Hovey nosed out the Shepard Stores 3½ to 2½.

Munger, Borsodi Expected to Face Martin Twins in Four-Ball Final

By Bill Grimes

After watching the kid teams during the qualifying round we predicted that the youngsters would dominate the Winchester annual four-ball invitation, and that is exactly what has happened.

Two of the pairs playing the semifinals today are composed of lads in their 'teens, while the members of the other teams are all in their early twenties.

Granted that the participants in the semifinals are outstanding four-ball combinations, still it was a remarkable feature for them to come through against the brand of opposition they faced during the first and second rounds.

Annually, the Winchester invitation attracts the best four ballers in the district but seldom such a classy array of stars as qualifying this year in the championship flight.

Jack Munger and Fred Borsodi from Austin and Houston, Texas, respectively, medalist of the qualifying round, went through Bobby Knowles and Harry Hood, Jr., in the first round and then eliminated Jimmy Gannon and Stuart Dineen.

Munger and Borsodi were three under par against Knowles and Hood, but had enough in reserve to beat Gannon and Dineen 1 up.

In the afternoon, Munger was 69 on his own ball and it was fortunate for the Texans that he was, for little Jimmy Gannon, after stepping to the turn in 33 in the first round, tossed a 70, two under par, at Munger and Borsodi.

Winchester 4-Ball

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

Semifinals

Jack Munger and Fred Borsodi, Texas, vs. J. J. Fay and H. Goldberger, Woodland.

R. G. Hartigan, Hatherly, and Dan Shea, South Shore, vs. Leo and Edward Martin, Waltham.

Joe Fay and Herman Goldberger, who were to play Munger and Borsodi today, engaged in two tough matches yesterday. They were one down to Art McIntyre and Harry Smith, going to the 14th hole in the first round, when they elected to stage one of the greatest finishes ever seen at Winchester, playing the next four holes 3, 3, 3, 3 to take the match 2 and 1.

In the p. m. Fay and Goldberger put out Art Rogers, Jr., and Eddie Peterson, one of the strongest pairs in the field, in a 19-hole match.

Munger and Borsodi appear to improve with each round. If such is the case, there does not appear to be much hope for the Woodland team.

In the lower half of the championship flight, Dick Hartigan, Hatherly, and Dan Shea, South Shore, are playing the sensational Martin twins. Shea turned in a 71 for his own ball in the first round against "Bud" and Fran Galvin, but even that par smashing round gave the Crusaders only a 1 up victory.

In the afternoon, Hartigan and Shea forced Judge J. W. Monahan and Wally Cooledge to surrender their title, by taking a 2 and 1 decision from the defending champions.

The Martin twins, Leo and Eddie, have already vanquished two strong teams, Fred J. Wright, Jr., and Billy McPhail, and Jimmy Fisher and Eddie Gascoigne.

Against Wright and McPhail the Martins put together a better ball of 67 which was [illegible] and Gascoigne.

On [illegible] during the qualifying [illegible] and the two rounds of match play Munger and Borsodi will play the Martin twins in the finals this afternoon. If this prediction comes through, it will bring out the finest article of golf ever shot in a Winchester invitation.

Manush, Terry Leading Batsmen in Majors

New York, July 7 (AP)—Although Bill Terry of the Giants and Heinie Manush of the Washington Senators lost seven percentage points each during the past week, they retained the batting leaderships of the National and American Leagues.

Lou Gehrig, the Yankees' bombarding first-sacker, was the biggest ground gainer of the week. He hit safely 14 times out of 30.

MARTIN WANTS LEGION BOUT RECOGNITION

Bull Martin has got a very nasty grouch on because he wasn't named to meet Ernie Dusek in the main bout of Alex MacLean's wrestling show at the Boston Arena next Wednesday night.

MacLean picked Al Mercier, New England heavyweight champion, to meet the Omaha bad man in a two out of three falls bout to a positive finish because MacLean feels that Mercier will not only give Dusek the stormiest battle of his career but also beat him.

He matched the Bull with Dick Stahl in the semifinal, and the Bull accepted this lower billing because he has a plan in mind by which he'll work his way onto the list of prospective main-bouters MacLean is rounding up for his Crosscup-Pishon Post A. L. show later in the summer.

The Bull intends to "steal" next Wednesday night's show at the Boston Arena from Dusek and Mercier by simply putting up the most spectacular bout of his career against Stahl and by out-nastying the nasty Dusek man from Omaha.

MacLean's show thus takes on proportions of a bang up grappling carnival with the Bull, Dusek, Mercier and Stahl, the German Oak. He's also hooked up two fine special bouts, Rebel Bob Russell vs. George Saunders and John Spellman vs. Andy Brown, and is now working on the rest of his eight bout card.

Max Tries Gems to Win Back Dorothy

By MAX BAER

CHAPTER 17

Dorothy divorced me late in the Autumn of 1933, but that didn't end it. No, sir. Some time later I saw her in Oakland and—say, was I glad to see her! Plenty of girls to bounce around on my knees, but I was hankering for Dorothy.

"How are you, honey?" I asked.

"Fine."

"Where you living?"

She told me the name of her hotel.

"Let's go up to your room so I can have a talk with you," I said.

"No, no, no," replied Dorothy. "The divorce gets null and void if, within a year after it's granted, we happen to be visiting intimate-like."

"Okay, baby, I'll be seeing you," and I said goodby to Dorothy and hustled off to a jewelry shop. Diamonds are the things to win girls— and win 'em back.

"I'll be about wanting to buy out your store," I told the man.

SEEKS RECONCILIATION

I stuck the jewels in my pocket and went out hunting for Dorothy, but she wasn't in. I gave up about 11 o'clock that night, but early the next morning I drove up in front of Dorothy's hotel, honked the horn—a honk that was familiar to her—and pretty soon she came out and got in the car, and I handed her a load of jewels.

"What do you mean, I don't love you?" I asked. She was all smiles. "Let's go for a ride," I said and away we went.

Finally we came to an alley. I drove in there; looked like a good spot for necking. Well, we hadn't been there very long before some guy yanked open the door of the car, and another guy made a demand for Dorothy's new jewels.

"What's this all about?" she demanded.

"We're process servers, and we have come to reclaim the jewelry because it isn't all paid for," said one guy.

"Tell me, what is the meaning of all this?" said Dorothy, turning on me.

"He agreed to pay the balance last night," said the other guy, "and failed to do it. That's the reason."

WALKS OFF WITH DOG

Well, Dorothy opened up on me for putting her in an embarrassing spot, and I listened a while, and then I said: "Goodbye, dearie," and with that I hopped out of the car and was on my way.

I hadn't walked very far before I discovered I had something in my arms. It was Dorothy's pooch—a cocker spaniel. We knew each other well, so he galloped along with me and I went back to town. Then I headed for Ancil Hoffman's ranch in the Sacramento Valley, for Thanksgiving dinner.

With that she went to the telephone. It was near where the pooch was cooped. She tossed a few words at me from where she was standing at the 'phone and the pooch heard her and barked.

There are some people who say that my little pal Dorothy, finding the door to the pooch locked, picked up one of the Hoffman's prize chairs and busted in the door and rescued the pooch. But I won't go that far. I'll just say she grabbed her dog and dashed out of the house and into the cab with the process servers keeping her company, and they all drove away. And that's the last I've ever seen of Dorothy Dunbar Baer.

But, enough of how I wooed, won and lost Dorothy Dunbar; so I'll get back to discussing my battles in the ring.

That trip to New York in 1930-31 gave me national publicity and Ancil Hoffman, who was handling my affairs, began to cash in on it for me—but not often enough to please me. I thought I could whip anybody, anywhere, any time, and I saw no reason for not fighting every week.

Action meant money, and that's what I constantly needed plenty of. A fellow can't be an entertainer and have a wardrobe, and an auto, and a chauffeur, and lots of trinkets, without money.

But Ancil wouldn't sic me onto every Tom, Dick and Henry simply because there was a few dollars in it.

"You've got plenty to learn, and you can spend time between fights learning," he said.

"Sure," I answered. "About women. And am I learning!"

My complete record for 1931 wasn't so hot, and I wasn't so hot either, although I thought I could singe the beard of anybody in the world. I can see now what was wrong—very little defense, too much wild pitching, and too little seriousness.

The boys who play the moving stocks are feeling pretty blue. The silvers and the others did a little fading away yesterday while the rest of the list was moving along. This is in sharp contrast to the way they acted in the last few weeks, when they were the only ones to make progress. The street is swinging around to the view that inflation talk will be shelved temporarily while Joseph P. Kennedy and the other members of the commission do their best to reopen the capital markets.

Interest in the oils was revived by the fact the Lehman Trust added to its holdings as shown in its report. Along with this went the report that the aggressive buying of Socony Vacuum, interrupted for the last two weeks while the Texas situation was being straightened out, is being resumed. Volume in the market still has a long way to go to catch up with car loadings. Quiet accumulation is reported in wheat awaiting the lifting of hedging pressure which is expected some time next week. People who have followed Celanese in the past are more friendly to the stock.

PROFIT MOTIVE AGAIN COMING TO FRONT

New York Banks Are Making Effort to Boost Earnings

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

[illegible]

"Various methods have been employed by Germany for reducing its foreign debt. Not only have the amortization and sinking fund provisions of many bond indentures resulted in actual retirement of a considerable volume of securities, but there have been numerous conversions from foreign currencies into German currency, repatriation has proceeded actively, and depreciation of the currencies of several important creditor countries has resulted in automatic reduction of Germany's debt burden by several billion reichsmarks.

"In addition, amortization and repatriation have been greatly accelerated, in so far as the effect on foreign debt reduction is concerned, by the heavy depreciation at which German bonds have been quoted in the open market during the last few years. Financial history records no instance of retirement of external debt which equals the performance of Germany either in amount or in the rapidity with which the reduction has been effected."

Mathews Well Versed on Regulation

By Universal Service

W[illegible], July 7.—To [illegible] new [illegible] designed to [illegible] exchanges [illegible] Mathews [illegible] brings [illegible] profound knowledge of the [illegible] of regulation which were worked [illegible]

"Many listings, particularly in Chicago and Boston, were obtained merely to evade blue sky laws. In a checkup we found many issues in which, after the listings, there were no sales on the exchange in years."

Later many exemptions were [illegible] permits and ratings [illegible] by investors were dropped in favor of registration, the present federal method.

Besides all but [illegible] experience of this sort Mathews brings to his task a generous capacity for work and 22 years of varied activity in accounting, investigation, statistics and economics.

He has directed rate structures and scrutinized utility security issues for the Wisconsin Railroad Commission, taught at times in three universities and assisted in [illegible] of Samuel Insull's [illegible] for the superstructure of holding and investment companies [illegible]

[illegible] President Roosevelt appointed him to the Federal Trade Commission. He is a Republican with no conspicuous factional affiliation [illegible] generally rated as a liberal. MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Elmer H. Bright & Co.—The indolent appearance of the market has continued another week. It would scarcely be expected, however, that the quotations for securities would exhibit much enthusiasm in the face of disturbing news from Germany and heavy decreases in the rate of steel operations which have been reported for two successive weeks. On the other hand, car loadings, and particularly electric power production, give evidence that industry is still maintaining a favorable level of operations.

Hornblower & Weeks—We would continue to favor the constructive side of the market on the theory that the low levels of May and June will prove to have laid the foundation for a substantial recovery movement in anticipation of at least a normal pickup in business this fall.

Portfolio Changes of Trust Listed

In the three months ended June 30, Second, Third and Fourth National Investors Corporations, which have practically identical common stocks in their portfolios, made several changes in their investments although few of the shifts were of large seize.

Among the major combined purchases were 3400 shares of Air Reduction Co., 2300 du Pont, 7200 National Steel, 5200 Sears, Roebuck and 7000 Westinghouse Air Brake, while the more important sales were 3800 American Telephone, 3300 Consolidated Oil, 4000 General Motors and 6900 Procter & Gamble.

Combined portfolios of the three trusts on June 30 and March 31, and changes in the three months, were as follows (in shares):

AMERICA SEEN QUALIFIED FOR GOLD RETURN

Outstanding Features of the Reserve Act Are Outlined

By Associated Press

Basel, Switzerland, July 7—America qualified for a return to the gold standard by its January gold [illegible], Leon Fraser, president of the Bank for International Settlements, [illegible] in his annual report.

[illegible] features of the report were [illegible] by Fraser with George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, who arrived this morning for important financial conferences. The report will be taken up Monday by the bank's directors.

"America's gold act," Fraser said, "reopens the door to international discussions as to the time for definitive stabilization on a permanent parity" of currencies.

Fraser assured Harrison the Bank for International Settlements persists in the view that "mankind will suffer fewer hardships if problems forced upon it by the world crisis be dealt with by common counsel and joint accord."

This apparently struck a broad keynote for Harrison's visit.

As if forecasting a German default on interest on the Dawes and Young loans, Fraser, an American, pointed out that there had been in the last 12 months a series of backward movements in international financial and monetary relations. He mentioned:

More moratoria, more transfer impediments, more gold hoarding, more conversion of foreign balances and their repatriation into home currency or into gold, almost complete cessation of new long term lending abroad and further limitation or reduction in the volume of short term credits.

Fraser admitted there had been marked progress in national fields [illegible] the hardest route back to [illegible] financial internationalism may be found to pass through an era of nationalism in which each country liquidates the past by its own efforts.

Fraser and other high officials met Harrison who was accompanied by Allan F. Sproul, deputy governor of the reserve bank.

Montagu Normann, governor of the Bank of England, arrived an hour earlier and was expected to confer with Harrison. Sir Otto Niemeyer, controller of finance, and H. H. Siepman of the Bank of England came with him.

European financial circles attached deep significance to the conference.

Such vital questions as stabilization of the dollar and the pound and a possible return by England and the United States to the gold standard were expected to be discussed.

There was speculation as to whether Harrison's visit would result in the New York federal reserve joining the board of directors of the B. I. S. provided Washington's approval was secured.

Officials of the international bank insisted, however that especial significance should not be attached to the talks. They expressed belief no agreements on major matters would be reached.

'All-Americans' Tilt in Court

Portland, Me., July 7—A cross-section of America was portrayed in superior court here as a Yankee jury heard Mrs. Isabella O'Neil, of French extraction, charge Mrs. Frances Jachiwiez, Polish, of beating her following an argument with Mrs. Janette Fasule, Italian.

Arthur D. Welch, Irish was the plaintiff's counsel, while Max L. Pinansky, Jewish, represented the defendant. Pinansky's Chinese guest, Charlie Wong of Boston, watched the proceedings with a German private detective.

Poor Box Looter Trapped by Alarm

Providence, July 7 — Arrested while attempting to rob the poor box in Holy Rosary Church, a man identifying himself as Frank Traverson, [illegible], of Chicago, was trapped by an improvised burglar alarm system installed by the pastor.

The church was looted so many times that Rev. Antonio Rebello installed an electric alarm about a year ago. Traverson was its ninth victim.

Stock Exchange Share Volume Is Smallest in Years

By International News Service

New York, July 7—Wall Street today winds up its first week under government control with the volume of trading on the New York Stock Exchange the smallest in 10 years.

On no single day did the volume exceed 500,000 shares and the total orders for the four full trading days—there was one day out for Fourth of July—did not equal what would have been considered an active day two or three years ago.

The federal commission that is to regulate Wall Street was set up and the general feeling is that the financial district came off better than expected. One of its own former large scale operators was named chairman.

The [illegible] though, is being credited with three of the five votes on the commission, but as recent as three weeks ago this group of theorists was expected to have four of the five.

It will be another month before the commission actually begins to function. In handling new issues it will take over the federal trade commission's staff, already functioning, so that the flow of new securities should encounter no more than the formal hindrance under the law.

For the stock exchange part of its work as well as the section dealing with corporation reports, the commission will have to recruit new staffs. These are the staffs about which there have been rumors in the financial district.

But on the regulation of stock trading the Wall Street information is that there will be a minimum of that for the next two or three months. Moderate rather than drastic regulation in the early stages is looked for.

Next to the securities commission, financial interest has centered in the German upheaval and the violence in the San Francisco dock strike. The German debt settlement with Great Britain, which is discriminatory to American investors in the Young and Dawes loans, has stirred up considerable resentment, with hopes that the American government will take a leaf from the British and exert plenty of pressure.

Irregularity has marked the business trend. Steel production due to the Fourth of July holiday took a header, dropping to 23 per cent of the theoretical plant capacity. Two weeks ago steel output was around 56 per cent of capacity.

Electric power has again failed to [illegible] its percentage gain over a year ago, but freight car loadings and automobile production both were higher. These three indices, however do not cover this week but the week before.

Auto output is expected to show a sharp drop this week, when the figures are available next Tuesday.

The industrial stock price index closed last night at 97.34 against 95.72 last Saturday, a net gain of 1.62. The rail index finished at 43.55, compared with 43.98 on Saturday, a loss of .43, while the utilities closed at 23.8[illegible] against 23.76, a net gain of .0[illegible].

PHILIP MORRIS NET LARGER

New York, July 7—Sale of Philip Morris cigarettes by Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., has arisen so rapidly this year that for the first three months of the fiscal year which began on April 1, earnings are understood to have been in excess of $300,000, or 75 cents a share. This would compare with net profit for the entire fiscal year ended March 31, 1934, of $503,661, equal to $1.21 a share on the 415,041 shares outstanding.

Until the company introduced its present Philip Morris cigarette, its principal brand was the Marlboro cigarette which retails at 20 cents for 20. Sales of this brand are currently ahead of a year ago, despite the unusual success of the Philip Morris cigarette in the higher priced field.

Philip Morris is still engaged in working out details of its plan for acquisition of properties of Continental Tobacco Co. and liquidation of Philip Morris Consolidated, Inc., as previously reported by Dow, Jones & Co. Announcement by the company is likely this summer.

HOUSING PLAN STIMULANT TO BUSINESS

New Law Has Some Good Features, in Haney's Opinion

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 7.—A few people are counting on the new housing legislation as a business stimulant. It seems that we are a long time getting rid of the notion that purchasing power can be "created" by law and that work can be "made" by government.

Lewis Haney

The new law has some good features. I do not think it will do much harm, if carefully administered. That is about all.

There is too little effective demand for new building; the cost of building (labor and materials) is too high and the credit terms under the act are too strict to allow one to hope for more. If building were cheap or if the government were going to give building money away something might be done. But as things are, what are the chances?

In this connection, a persistent notion is that the government should directly or indirectly go into the business of providing cheap housing, "slum clearance," etc. There has been talk of this for over a year, but practically nothing has been done.

After all the talk, it seems to me that the failure of the slum clearance projects to take hold shows why it is so hard to put unsound ideas into practice. It shows how economic laws win in the end.

You see, slums are "man made" and a new dealer would say, "let us just abolish them." But man himself finds his acts limited by environment and economic forces. So such attempts fail—sooner or later.

Why do we have slums? There are two chief reasons—first, we have poor people; second, we have areas where rents must be low.

Unfortunately, many people cannot afford to pay much rent, and some can't pay any. They go to sections where rents are very low and we call these places "slums." It does not pay to build good, up-to-date residences there.

But, at the same time, the land is often located near business sections and is very valuable because of its potentialities. Thus the "site rent" (not the building space) is high.

In such cases the government can compel decent sanitation and fire protection, but not much more—unless it gives our money away.

But no government New Deal can do two things required, namely, to do away with poor people, and to make land abundant and cheap in areas near city jobs. We can help them and show them charity. But land location is what it is. If it is in the heart of a city it is bound to be valuable and pay high taxes.

No one, government or individual, can afford to buy such land and build "modern" housing on it, and then proceed to rent dwelling space at any such figure as $7.50 per room. In New York city, it is probable that about $12.50 per room would be a minimum. After the cost of the site come interest, maintenance charges and taxes.

Now there are many thousands of people who cannot possibly pay that much. What are you going to do for them?

The plain fact is that the government is in exactly the same fix as the individual landlord. It cannot wisely make a permanent investment which does not pay. It can give our money away, but even that can last only as long as it can take the money away from those who have any.

Again, if attractive housing could be furnished in slum areas, people would be drawn away from outlying areas, causing vacancies there and hindering development plans. The government would be competing with its citizens.

As I see it, the two chief remedies for the building and other "capital goods" industries are (1) to get prices of building materials and labor down to where the product can be sold profitably, and (2) to get our money stabilized on a definite standard of value.

Car, Taxi Crash, One Driver Held

Charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, drunkenness and driving so as to endanger, William A. C. Miller, 24, of Wenham, was to appear in East Cambridge court today, the result of his arrest last night when the automobile he was allegedly driving crashed with a taxi-cab at Oxford and Kirkland streets, Cambridge.

Miller went to the station to report the accident. The cab driver, Harold J. Rice, of Grove street, and two passengers, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Lyons, of 326 Beacon street, Somerville, were cut.

STOCK PRICES ARE FIRM AT CLOSING

New York, July 7—The stock market finished its first week under federal regulation today by turning in a performance which bade fair to rival last Saturday's session, when 189,000 shares changed hands making it the slowest since 1923.

Oil stocks were perhaps the best performers in the apathetic trading. Standard Oil of N. J., Standard Oil of California, Consolidated Oil and Continental Oil scored fractional gains none of which ran to as muc has a half a point.

Trading in the steel shares which ordinarily accounts for a substantial proportion of the day's turnover, was almost non-existent. United States Steel, Bethlehem, and several others appear on the tape at infrequent intervals and were fractionally above yesterday's close.

A similar situation existed in the motor shares where Chrysler and General Motors held around yesterday's closing prices as traders found no incentive for committing themselves on either side of the market.

Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, ordinarily a dull issue was again an individual feature as turnover was again comparatively high, lifting the issue fractionally to duplicate its year's high.

Stocks were generally firm in dull trading in the first hour with narrow prices changes ruling in leading shares. Rail shares gave the best performance with Delaware & Hudson advancing 2 points. Louisville & Nashville gained a point and Atchison was fractionally higher.

U. S. Steel and Ludlum Steel were at fractionally higher levels. Capital Administration was a major fraction above its last closing price. Goodyear moved against the general trend, slipping back around a point.

Bayuk Cigar showed strength, recording a gain of 2 points. Commercial Investment Trust was 2 points higher. Neisner was over a point higher. Texas Land Trust was a point higher.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 90,000 shares.

Wall Street scanned the week-end trade news for signs of resumption of industrial operations after the sharp curtailment witnessed this week in several lines. A moderate rebound in steel activities was forecast.

June chain store reports published so far indicate their business failed to hold the pace of gain over 1933 of the preceding months, but dollar sales still were well ahead of last year. Montgomery Ward & Co. reported June sales of $19,266,336 against $16,103,560 in June, 1933, a gain of 19.6 percent compared with 37.3 percent in May.

The American Iron & Steel Institute reported steel ingot output last month totaled 3,015,972 tons compared with 3,352,695 in May and with 2,564,420 in June, 1933. For the first six months, output was 16,180,889 against 8,874,388 in the corresponding 1933 period.

Weekly commodity price indices show an easing off following recent advances to new 1934 peaks. The bureau of labor statistics' index for wholesale commodity prices during the week ended June 30 declined three-tenths of one per cent to 74.8.

Monthly figures compiled by the New York Stock Exchange on the outstanding short interest reflected the recent low ebb of professional speculation as well as reluctance to take the bear side while hopes for an autumn resumption of business recovery are still strong. The short interest declined to 717,241 shares from 741,038 in May.

Foreign exchanges moved narrowly. The British pound was unchanged at $5.04½. French francs sagged .00⅛ of a cent to 5.59⅛ cents.

Montgomery Ward Sales Are Larger

Chicago, July 7—Saleso f Montgomery Ward & Co. for June and five months, without consideration of change in number of stores during the year compare as follows:

	1934	Inc.	Inc. %
June sales	$19,266,336	$ 3,162,776	19.6

Sales in May increased 37.3% over May, 1933.

Celotex Co. Net Loss Is $197,669

New York, July 7—The report of the Celotex Co., operated by receivers, for the six months ended April depreciation, interest and amortization shows net loss of $197,669 after ization, but before compensation of receivers and their counsel, compared with net loss of $558,781 in the six months ended April 30, 1933.

Dividend Changes in Week Favorable

New York, July 7—There were 47 favorable dividend changes during the week compared with 36 the week before, the Standard Statistics Co. reports. Unfavorable changes numbered 18 compared with 12.

Commodity Prices in Week Are Lower

Washington, July 7—Wholesale commodity prices declined 3-10ths of 1 per cent. during the week ended June 30 to 74.8 per cent., according to Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Steel Shipments in Month Are Larger

New York, July 7—It is likely shipments of finished products by United States Steel Corp. in June were the largest for any month since April, 1931. This will mean that there was a substantial increase over the total of 745,054 tons delivered by the corporation in May. Report will be published at noon next Tuesday.

Early indications are that the gain in shipments will exceed 100,000 tons and may reach as much as 125,000 tons. Much will depend upon the total outgo in the last few days of the month when the corporation was completing contracts on which delivery dates expired with the end of the second quarter.

So far as can be learned steel consumers were not cancelling orders toward the end of the shipping period because on most of the business the price paid was much below the quotations which had been announced for third-quarter business.

The reduction in steel prices did not come until the end of the second quarter. An increase as now looked for would make the total deliveries for last month in the neighborhood of 850,00 to 875,000 tons. This is the first time the shipments exceeded the 800,000-ton mark since April, 1931. In that month they amounted to 878,558 tons.

In May, with shipments of 754,054 tons, the corporation had a daily average of approximately 27,600 tons for 27 working days. It is reasonable to anticipate that the increase in June amounted to more than 15 per cent allowing for the anticipated spurt toward the end of the month. This would bring the total to the figure now estimated.

Actually, shipments of the corporation in June were considerably greater than production. In the last two weeks deliveries were being made from some of the accumulated stocks of finished products to take care of specifications of customers. This stock was accumulated with a view of meeting the shipping requirements of consumers.

Deliveries of 850,000 to 875,000 tons in June will bring the total for the second quarter to around 2,240,000 to 2,260,000 tons, making that period the largest since the second quarter of 1931, when shipments were 2,295,840 tons. In the three months ended March 31, last, deliveries amounted to only 1,305,486 tons, so that the increase in the period just closed could amount to as much as 950,000 tons, or between 70 per cent and 75 per cent.

Since the beginning of the current month there has been a sharp drop in deliveries by the corporation, but this falling off has not been as great as in the production of ingots.

Five Months' Railroad Earnings Up

Washington, July 7—Class I railroads of the United States for the first five months in 1934 had a net railway operating income of $183,977,640, at annual rate of return of 2.11 per cent on property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics. In the first five months of 1933, their net railway operating income was $94,918,398 of 1.08 per cent on property investment.

Gross for the first five months of 1934 totaled $1,347,033,883 compared with $1,136,911,878 for the same period in 1933, an increase of 18.5 per cent. Operating expenses for the first five months of 1934 amounted to $1,003,889,536 compared with $883,616,031 for the same period in 1933, an increase of 13.6 per cent.

A. Hollander & Son Reports

New York, July 7—Report of A. Hollander & Son, Inc., including 100 per cent owned subsidiaries, for six months ended June 30, 1934, shows net income of $202,396 after interest, depreciation, dividends on preferred stock of Bertram J. Goodman, Inc., federal taxes, etc., equal to $1.01 a share on 200,000 shares of capital stock outstanding. This compares with $28,506, or 14 cents a share, in the first half of 1933. Above figures are exclusive of company's proportionate share, amounting to $5340, of the profit of A. Hollander & Son of Paris for six months ended May 31, 1934, while the 1933 figure is exclusive of a loss amounting to $23,935.

To Appeal Manhattan Ry. Decision

New York, July 7—A recommendation that the decision of the New York State court of appeals, awarding Manhattan Railway Co. $539,000 for condemnation of the company's 42nd Street elevated spur which, with interest, amounts to $1,000,000 be taken to the United States Supreme Court for final determination is to be made by Charles Franklin, general counsel to the company. The company, which had sought to recover claims of $6,000,000 was opposed by the city and abutting property owners.

It is the opinion of counsel that a more adequate award would be obtained from the Supreme Court, where principles of valuation of railroad property are fairly well settled.

GEN. BAKING TO PAY DIVIDENDS

By Associated Press

New York, July 7—Directors of the General Baking Co. declared a dividend of $4 on the preferred stock and a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, both payable July 23 to stock of record July 16.

Previous dividends were $2 on the preferred and 25 cents on the common, paid on January 2, 1934. The preferred payment covers the period from January 1, 1934 to June 30, 1934.

Frederic H. Frazier, chairman, said in a statement that the company had hoped to have a decision from the courts in the action of certain minority stockholders against the management before declaring dividends, but because of legal proceedings indicating further delay, the board decided to take dividend action "to avoid undue hardship to the stockholders."

World Ford Sales in June Are Larger

New York, July 7—World sales of Ford passenger cars and commercial units in June totaled 101,661 units, the largest June sales volume since June, 1930, and compares with 58,543 in June, 1933. Six months' sales were 489,915 units against 223,727 in first half of 1933.

Alaska Juneau Profit Estimated

San Francisco, July 7—Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Co. estimates June profit after operating expenses and development charges at $212,700 before depreciation, depletion and federal taxes, against $137,040 in June, 1933.

For six months ended June 30, 1934, estimated profit was $1,204,950 before depreciation, depletion and federal taxes against $611,300 in first half of previous year.

DOLLAR GAINS IN LONDON

By Associated Press

London, July 7—The United States dollar moved narrowly today in a quiet Saturday session, closing at 5.04⅛ to the pound for a gain of ⅛ during the day. The dollar opened at its over-night level of 5.04¼.

The French franc weakened from an opening of 76.47 to the pound to close at 76.53. Its final quotation yesterday was 77.44.

The price of bar gold advanced 1½ pence to 137 shillings, 10½ pence ($34.78) a fine ounce and an amount valued at £58,000 ($392,610) was purchased.

Sonotone Corp. Sales Increased

New York, July 7—Sonotone Corp. (hearing aid manufacturers) report June sales of $127,876 before dealer conversions, against $56,870 in June, 1933. For six months ended June 30, 1934, sales totaled $642,398, against $285,753 in first six months of 1933.

Baltimore & Ohio Loadings Larger

New York, July 7—Baltimore & Ohio Railroad loaded and received from connections during July 184,444 cars of revenue freight, against 183,736 in May and 170,258 in June, 1933.

Crude Oil Stocks Show Increase

Washington, July 7—Stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum during the week ended June 30 increased 591,000 barrels to 343,707,000 barrels, according to Oil Administration.

Atlantic Refining Net Is Higher

Philadelphia, July 7—Atlantic Refining Co. will show earnings for second quarter substantially over preceding quarter. Net will also be above actual profit from operations in second quarter of 1933, although statement for that period was obscured by extraordinary profit from sale of Union Atlantic Co.

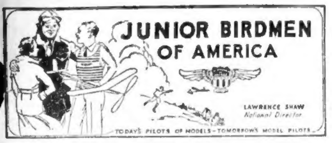
Net for first quarter was equal to 23 cents a share, while net for second quarter of 1933 was 79 cents a share, of which 49 cents was for sale of Union Atlantic properties.

Conditions the past three months have been distinctly better than in either of these two periods. Operations in April and May were at a profit and it seems certain that June was also profitable. Selling prices of gasoline the past quarter were ½ cent higher than second quarter of last year.

Volume of sales has been higher than a year ago, reflecting improvement in demand and in competitive position. Profits would have been far above corresponding period but for increases in operating costs the past year. Crude oil prices are much higher than a year ago, when the mid-continent crude market was almost demoralized.

For months Atlantic has been acquiring oil leases, mainly in Texas, so that it is now producing more of its crude requirements, although because of proration agreements it still must buy a good part of its crude.

Wages and other operating costs have also risen. The company raised wages of all employes an average of 10 per cent beginning Jan. 1, 1934.



JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
LAWRENCE SHAW National Director
TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS—TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

While most of the Junior Birdmen and Junior Birdwomen, are competing in or watching today's model plane derby at the Playstead in Franklin Park—and all excited about it, too—it is too late to do any more talking about it here and too early to give you any results.

So we will get to the air dictionary tests which we announced last week.

James Cotter

The dictionary list, the first section of which has just been concluded is the most popular of all the features we have published so far. Of course the air insignia (and there's one of these published today) is fast gaining, but from the number of letters received, the air dictionary is still in the leading spot.

But there will even be other features inaugurated soon to rival these two so keep your eyes peeled on the column. Don't miss any of the air dictionary lists, part two of which will follow shortly. And be sure you clip out all of the U. S. aircraft insignias.

Remember, we can't supply back features. If you cut them out for your scrap book, and studied them for future reference in your aviation and model building work, let's see just how much good they did you. Let's see how many of the definitions you understood, how many you remember.

This test is given in the spirit of fun, not work! No one is set over you to see that you don't peek at your scrap books. But we leave it to yourself not to. There are no prizes, and we are not asking you to let us know how you made out. But just go over this list of questions, write the answers down on a piece of paper. And then on Monday, when the correct answers are published, let's see how many you had right, just for the fun of it.

KNOW THE ANSWERS

1—What is dihedral angle? This one should be easy since we used it in all the models of our model building course.

2—What is a ring cowling? Most army and navy planes have them.

3—Describe the purpose of an altimeter. Did you know that the altitude record in a plane is held by Gustave Lemoine, a Frenchman. He reached a height of 44,819 feet.

4—Give the chief difference between a rigid and a non-rigid aerostat. Non-rigid aerostats were filled with hot air in the days of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin.

5—How can you tell a cambered from a non-cambered wing? The Wright brothers after early experiments, cambered their wings.

6—What is down wash? You have heard of "prop" wash many times, but this is probably a new one.

8—Define center of gravity. This is a difficult question but every model builder should become familiar with it.

9—How is air speed different from land speed? Air speed is measured by the rush of air through a tube usually located on a strut near the tip of the wing. The rush of air produces a speed indication on the air speed instrument.

WHAT IS AN AIRPLANE?

11—What is aviation? And don't let this one fool you!

12—What is an airplane? You will be surprised how few people can correctly define this one!

13—What is the advantage of an adjustable pitch propeller over the set propeller? This is question number 13 and of course we had to make it hard. Some props can be adjusted from the cockpit, you know.

14—What is the purpose of the ailerons on the wings of planes? The ailerons are moved by moving the joy stick from left to right.

17—What is an amphibian plane? If you can't answer this one, wait a while. The new Junior Birdmen plane will be an amphibian and one look at it will give you the answer.

EXPLAIN "CONTACT"

18—What is dope used for? Model builders use it on their larger craft.

19—When is the word "Contact" used in aviation and for what purpose? And here's a tip. Our definition was partially wrong. Can you tell just where?

Those questions are not so difficult. As a matter of fact, I'll bet that you could have given me the answers to several even before you studied the air dictionary lists. But that's only a few.

In Monday's column, the answers to the questions and the list in which the definition referred to appears, will be printed. See how many you can answer over the week-end.

Happy Landings!

$1500 Brookline Blaze Ruins Car

Fire of undetermined origin, in the brick garage of A. C. Stargara in Mason terrace, Corey Hill Brookline, early today destroyed an automobile.

The car had been run into the garage several hours before. Damage was estimated at $1500.

CITY HOSPITAL ORDER BALKED

Pending completion of an investigation by Councilman Henry Selvitella of East Boston, a transfer order for $45,000 for purchase of equipment for the new laundry and kitchen of the City hospital is being held up, by the City Council.

It was decided to table the order after Councilman Selvitella declared:

"Because of the presence of the gentlemen of the press, I don't care to go into details at this time, but there is something rotten here."

Missing Auto Is Found Safe in Yard

The next time Joseph Ernshaw of Prentiss place, Roxbury, discovers his car missing, he will be sure to look in the back yard before reporting the theft.

Ernshaw told Roxbury Crossing police that his car had been stolen from in front of his house. A short time later he reported that he had found the car in his back yard.

Nine Wives Win Freedom. Mates Offer No Contest

Nine Essex county women had marital freedom today after Judge Harry R. Dow of Salem Probate Court awarded them decrees of divorce, unopposed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stone of North Andover won her freedom from Van Zandt Stone of Miami, Fla., after she charged he was a liquor addict during their six years of wedded life.

Mrs. Celia Marcus of Lynn was granted a decree and custody of her small daughter, when she testified that Samuel J. Marcus of Boston was cruel and abusive.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dunton of Marblehead was allowed a divorce from her New York broker hubsand Harlowe M. Dunton, whom she charged with cruel and abusive treatment. She was awarded custody of their children.

Mrs. Ruth F. Cleasby of Lynn besides a decree was given the right to resume her maiden name. Cruelty and abuse were the grounds.

Mrs. Eleanor F. Sargeant of Newburyport obtained a divorce and custody of her three children, when she accused Raymond F. Sargent of desertion.

Four others awarded divorces were Mrs. Hannah Wollerschield of Lynn, from Harry A. Wollerschield, cruel and abusive treatment; Mrs. Lina Leppanen of Lynn, after charging Albert Leppanen with being cruel and abusive; Mrs. Dorothy L. Hefferney of Lynn was divorced from her husband, John, on grounds of desertion and Mrs. Mary Agnes McKenna of Lawrence won a decree from Francis J. McKenna.

Legion Leader Drowns in Lake

Brookfield, July 7—The body of Attorney Thomas P. Shea of Longmeadow, a leader in American Legion and Republican political circles in western Massachusetts, was found in Lake Lashaway here.

The body was clad in a bathing suit and Medical Examiner Charles Deland said that death was due to accidental drowning.

JURY TIRES MAN PLEADS GUILT

Twelve conscientious Suffolk County jurors were today thankful probably to Benjamin Gansarage, of Arlington street, Chelsea.

It all came about while a jury was deciding the fate of Gansarage, defendant in an assault case.

The jurors, perspiring and suffering from the heat, had been in deadlock nearly four hours, when the defendant got tired of waiting and pleaded guilty.

Judge Albert Hayden notified the jury to return to the courtroom, after Gansarage paid his fine and went home.

West Pointers to Train at Benning

Fort Benning, Ga., July 7 (AP)—The army's fledglings, the senior class at West Point, are coming here for modern warfare training for the first time in history. They will be here for two weeks, beginning July 25.

Heretofore, only full-fledged officers have been taught the latest in attack and defense. Many new weapons, tanks and other equipment have had their first try-out under actual conditions of war here.

Holyoke Census Shows 1328 Loss

Holyoke has lost 1,328 in population in four years, according to Massachusetts unemployment census figures just given out. The city has 55,203 residents, as against 56,537 in 1930. On January 2, it had 24,318 workers, 13,829 on full time; 6384 out of work and 4105 on part time.

The nearby town of Ludlow, with 9133 inhabitants, has gained 257 in four years. Of its 3750 workers 681 are jobless.

Chicago Burial Racket Ring Bared in Row

By Universal Service

Chicago, July 7—A major scandal was disclosed in Chicago when charges were made that the dead have been robbed of bought-and-paid-for caskets and funeral garments by a burial racket ring, then tossed into rough boxes and buried surreptitiously.

The charges came to light when a controversy between the Chicago Funeral Directors' Association and Coroner Frank J. Walsh was made public. The association charged that Walsh was usurping powers which the laws allot to the mayor and the department of health. Walsh answered that a group of "veritable ghouls" was engaged in body-snatching practices.

Walsh cited one case of a young man who was murdered and whose father paid an undertaker $325 for casket and funeral. The father, who lived out of town, returned home but was informed by friends that no funeral ceremonies had been conducted.

FLEET LEADERS FETED BY R. I.

Newport, R. I., July 7—The state of Rhode Island gave a dinner in honor of Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, commander in chief of the United States battle force fleet now based in Narragansett bay.

More than 400 guests, including officers of the fleet, state and city officials and civilian guests, attended. Governor Theodore F. Green was host. The dinner is one of two at which the state will honor the fleet. The other will take place when the scouting force arrives. The state appropriated $5000 to entertain the fleet.

Among the speakers were United States Senator Jesse Metcalf of Rhode Island, Admiral Reeves, Mayor Mortimer A. Sullivan of Newport, and Commander A. De Lestrange of the French light cruiser D'Entrecastreaux.

BRAWNY POLICE FOE DIES AT 82

Haverhill, July 7—This city's modern Hercules who, with his two large fists, beat up more policemen than any other man in the city, and lived to become their most beloved friend, died in his 82nd year.

The strong man, Henry Farrington, of River street, died of heart attack at his home. Farrington several years ago swore off liquor, it was declared. Since his pledge, he frequently dropped into police headquarters to talk over his exploits with the patrolmen.

It was recalled that it would require a half dozen officers to down Farrington when he was imbibing.

Italy Checks Up on Primo

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

An Italian diplomat is over here to find out how Primo lost his title.

History shows that diplomats never put on the gloves. They are the matchmakers of trouble.

They are steaming up a nice kettle of grief in Europe right now. In a few months the soup will be ready.

County Government Abolition Sought

THE MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE spurned the recommendation of one of its leading committees that county government be investigated.

The rejected idea was inspired by the thought that burdensome taxes might be eased for the benefit of the taxpayers.

Nearly every legislator must have known that the county form of government is as out of date today as an ancient "flivver."

But a bordering state is blazing the new trail of sensible economy. The New York Legislature meets in special session next Tuesday to authorize a constitutional amendment by which New York City can rid itself of its five useless counties.

The counties are strongholds of politics.

They provide fat jobs with little or no work attached to them, which are tempting rewards to hand out to political workers.

Therefore, although the excuse for county governments has long since passed, they have been preserved for the patronage that is in them and for no other reason.

THE Senators and Representatives at this special session, however, cannot evade the issue or pass the buck as they have done in previous sessions.

They are meeting in response to a special call from Governor Lehman to vote on this particular question.

The spotlight will be on them, and from their votes the public can determine whether they should be re-elected to the Legislature or be defeated and retired to private life.

Try Buying for Keeps

For the ladies. An editorial. About buying habits. Since they hold the purse strings of the nation.

It is the important matter of returning purchases to stores that is proving disturbing. And costing the women in this country a sizeable sum each year.

In Boston, according to the Department of Commerce, volume of returns in one year amounted to $20,000,000.

Why should this prove disturbing and costly?

Because someone has to pay for it. And that someone is the purchaser who keeps merchandise.

Wrapping, delivering, examining and calling for return merchandise costs money, which must, in the long run, be added to the price of goods.

So we point out to the ladies that for every purchase of goods that is permanent, there is an invisible charge for the things returned.

And, we are sure, bring price reductions which will be welcomed by frugal ladies.

Kennedy Able Leader

He starts his biggest job with avowed determination to keep manipulation and deception out of Wall Street and other stock markets.

At 25 Kennedy became Boston's youngest bank president, heading the Columbia Trust Company.

Two years later he was in charge of operating the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company (Fore River), then mightily engaged in helping Uncle Sam win the World War.

Kennedy has been a factor in the motion picture world. He obtained much practical experience for his new work when he managed one of State Street's biggest brokerage houses.

With his associates, he has ample power to curb stock market gambling and insure a fair deal, which will also be an entirely "New Deal," for the investor.

Is Statue Misplaced?

Associated Press dispatch from Montreal quotes Sir Wilfred Grenfell as saying the statue honoring the Vikings' visit to Massachusetts is probably misplaced.

Sir Wilfred thinks Erickson and his companions never got farther south than Labrador when the Northmen made their reputed pre-Columbus cruise.

The whole matter is, of course, controversial. But many distinguished historians have supported the story of the Vikings' visit to various Bay State points.

Sir Wilfred is reported to have said the coast of Massachusetts is much too precipitous to have provided a landing for the Vikings.

There must be some mistake here. There's certainly nothing precipitous about the coast along the South Shore and Cape Cod.

One of the claims for the authenticity of Plymouth Rock is that it was the ONLY rock there on which the Mayflower folk could have set foot.

New Landing Grounds

Forcing down of a Boston-New York airplane in the play yard of the Westerly, R. I., Junior High School opens up a vista of new school property uses.

The play yard was found to be a very good landing ground. Many other such places are available during vacation days.

Our school properties have been subject heretofore to numerous outside uses, including social gatherings, card parties and Election Day voting.

Last but not least, they have been used for the spread of Communistic propaganda. As shown by an order just issued in New York forbidding their further use for such un-American purposes.

Port of Boston Gains

Cheering news. The Port of Boston gains.

In these times of large tonnages, the numerical gain is much more important than it would have been in the days when comparatively small sailing vessels carried the sea traffic.

The local offices of the United States Customs also reports that passenger travel on the water has been, and is, increasing.

The Jealous Man

By Winifred Black

Are there MOTHERS in this world who are jealous of their own daughters?

And there are daughters who are jealous of their own mothers

Winifred Black

There are sisters who are jealous of their own sisters and as to their sisters-in-law — dear, dear, it is really shocking.

A jealous woman must be jealous of someone.

If she can't be jealous of her husband she'll be jealous of her daughter, or jealous of her mother, or jealous of her maiden aunt, or jealous of the woman next door who wouldn't know her from Adam if she met her face to face.

I have known people with really fine things about them who were born jealous, and I have always been bitterly sorry for them.

I'd rather be chained to a rock in the blazing sun without a drop of water within a million miles than to be really jealous for one single, hideous hour.

If I found that torturing thing trying to get hold of my heart, I'd tear it out if I had to kill myself to do it.

A jealous woman can do more harm in one minute than she can remedy if she lives to be a hundred years old.

Why don't I say something about the jealous man?

Well, a jealous man is a nuisance. He's a fool and he knows it. And he tries to take it out on every poor unfortunate who happens to ome near him.

Men are jealous, not only in love, but also in business.

I have seen a rather intelligent doctor turn absolutely green when someone dared to speak too well of another man in his own profession within his hearing.

I have known an actor to suffer a violent illness beause another man made the hit he hoped to make himself.

The clerk in the office is jealous of the boss and sometimes the boss is jealous of his partner.

But men are not as bad as women when it comes to jealousy.

Did you ever know a decent man who was jealous of his own son-in-law? or a sane man who was jealous because his wife was fond of her father?

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

THE SWEET AND LOWDOWN

Now that women do at least half the proposing, an attractive man's Big Problem is how to prove to a persistent girl that she is NOT GOING to marry him.

Helen Rowland

You never can tell, these days, whether a legally separated pair will remarry each other or not, until they have spent enough "happy years apart" to celebrate their "tin - divorce" together.

A woman's beauty always "fits the crime." No matter how ravishing a famous divorcee may be, she can rate only half the fluttering publicity that a good-lokoing blonde gun-moll receives.

When a woman reaches the point where she can be "reasonable" about the "other woman" in a man's life, her love has practically gone into its last coma.

Never conclude that women are as independent as men are until men begin carrying vanity cases, and you see them rushing to powder their noses and fluff up their hair at the approach of a woman.

The savage covers himself with paint instead of with clothes—but a "civilized" woman prefers to do it with suntan.

It may be just as easy to LOVE a millionaire as it is to love a poor man; but when it comes to marrying one, you'll find yourself up against a lot more competition.

Many a girl could learn a thing or two about men from the mosquito, which always gets swatted for continually buzzing in a man's ears and pestering him with too much personal attention.

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

DON'T WAIT FOR JOB!

So now you've graduated. And of course, you're asking the same old question—

Elsie Robinson

"SHALL I WAIT FOR THE RIGHT JOB?"

Meaning, naturally, a fine position with a fat salary and a swell future. There's only one answer:

"NO!"

Yes, I know you think you're ready for the Big Adventure. You've accumulated a lot of technique—you've hung up a pretty good record.

But that hasn't made you ready for the Right Job. And, though you won't believe it, the greatest misfortune that could possibly happen to you right now would be to walk into that snap which you so covet. For you'll not be ready for any real job, nor will any real job be ready for you, until you've tackled a proposition concerning which you are, as yet, entirely ignorant.

NO CAMPUS TALKIE

Meaning what?

Meaning—LIFE, ITSELF . . . IN PERSON, NOT A CAMPUS TALKIE.

Right now you're thinking how grand it would be if you could get a place in some big office, school, engineering project, hospital, editorial room or other highly specialized and lucrative niche.

And you'd hoot with amazement if anyone advised you to spend the next year digging ditches burning brush, hashing in restaurants, swabbing down decks or selling neckties—at almost nothing a week—with large, gritty gobs of loneliness, discouragement, humiliation and anxiety thrown in for good measure. Yet the simple truth is this—

IF YOU WERE ABLE TO CHOOSE BETWEEN THE TWO PROGRAMS, YOU'D COME OUT AHEAD IF YOU TOOK THE TOUGH SPOT.

For right now you'll learn more in one day about yourself, your world and the other fellow by digging ditches than you would by sitting a year in an office. And that is the knowledge on which the failure or success of your life will depend.

For instance—you majored in journalism. You're crammed to the ears with theories on writing. But when it comes right down to brass tacks not one of them will be worth a damn to you.

For it isn't the "theory" that will make your words sing, or snarl or flame—it's the tears you've shed yourself, the fears you've felt, the hate that has burned, the hope that has healed you, the laughter that's carried you along.

NOT BETWEEN BOOKS

And that goes—no matter who you are or what you want to do. The vital and enduring facts of life can't be found between books. They can only be found in alleys and fields, kitchens and barns, wharves and basements—wherever people are at actual grips with hunger and horror and hard work.

SWEAT—that's the post-graduate course you'll have to take before you'll be worth a hoot in any business or profession, youngster. Sweat—your own and the other guys'. The why and wherefore.

People. People hustling you. People laughing at you. People cheating you. People telling you to go to hell. People forgetting all about you—wrestling with their own problems.

LIFE. The vast, unconquerable, unending mystery of life. Life—that hasn't any rules or answers—no pretty plots—no beginnings or endings Life that will "just go rollin' along," whether you like it or not.

People—Life—Hard Work. A tough combination that will take all the fizz out of you. That will give you something college courses and "right jobs" can never give you—A PROPER ESTIMATE OF YOUR UNIMPORTANCE — A HUMBLING GLIMPSE OF YOUR REAL IMPORTANCE.

So—pass up that Right Job and take ANY job that will lead you away from success and security, comfort and complacence, into the clamor and chaos of Life.

And then, maybe, if you have the courage to take it, you'll be worth something a year hence. And, if you haven't—it's as well to learn the Bad News right now.

By Edgar A. Guest

THE MISERY OF CHEATING

He cheated just a little and his comrade never knew.
He won a little silver cup to place upon a shelf,
And someone made a pretty speech and called him "sportsman true,"
Which only seemed to make him more disgusted with himself.

He took a sly advantage when nobody else could see.
He thought he would be proud to own that little trinket cheap,
He thought he would be happy to achieve that victory,
But when he went to bed that night he found he couldn't sleep.

The cup stood on his mantel shelf, but every time he turned
It seemed to whisper to him: "You're a liar and a cheat!
I'm the token of a triumph which you know you haven't earned.
I'm the symbol of a victory you know you can't repeat."

At last he took that cup away and hid it out of sight.
He couldn't bear to see it sneer upon his mantel shelf.
He'd fooled a dozen people for a bit of metal bright,
But when he got it home he found he couldn't fool himself.

Human Side of the News; Stories of the Sea

By Edwin C. Hill

The sea gives up three stories, one about bluff Bob Bartlett, the second, a grim tale of pirates off the China coast and the third, that of Joseph Mason Reeves, the new commander of the United States Fleet.

It is just 25 years since Bartlett, then a robust Newfoundlander of 32, shook hands with Admiral Peary 100 miles from the North Pole and wistfully watched the admiral set out with the Negro, Matt Hansen, on the dash that resulted in the discovery of the North Pole.

He would have given anything to have gone along, but as he said: "I'm a better sailor than Matt. But he's a better dog driver. The admiral knows his business."

SCORNS DOUBTERS

To this day it is a wonder to Bob that anyone can doubt that the admiral really got to the pole.

"Why," he says impatiently, when they begin to question the ability of Peary to cover 1132 miles in four days by sledges, they don't know what they are talking about. I, myself, have done 90 miles a day."

Forty years on the sea, twelve times shipwrecked and four times crushed in the ice, Bob Bartlett still answers its call, sailing as he did, the other day from New York for the Arctic.

This time his commission is to find out about the nesting and the breeding habits of the greater snow goose, a bird which summers in the Arctic, and winters as far south as Cuba.

There always will be something on the waters to lure Captain Bob, for, as he puts it in his own words: "I do love the sea as a dog loves its master in spite of clouts he gives it."

* * *

The Chinese pirates, increasingly active of late, committed their boldest stroke in the seizure of the crack British coastal ship, Shuntien, at the mouth of the Yellow River and the kidnaping of five British subjects.

WOMAN LEADS 40,000

This incident has received worldwide attention, and yet it is but a few months since two other British subjects were killed in a similar affair.

A master mind, with a fleet of fast, armed vessels, is believed behind the pirates.

One report, commonly accepted in Shanghai, is that a woman, Lai Choi San, is involved in this racket of the Chinese coast.

She is supposed to have as many as forty thousand men working for her, an elaborate spy system in the ports, and lieutenants in command of fortified islands.

The usual practises of the pirates is to plant some of their own men in the crew, overpower the ship officers and then unload the cargo and the possessions of the crew and the passengers on their own junks. As many as one hundred coolies on the larger boats will be in league with the pirates.

A Japanese boat was taken a few weeks ago by an educated pirate who spoke French and Japanese, and who, after robbing one thousand Chinese fugitives, used the seized ship to prey on other craft before making his escape.

Five renegade Europeans, four of them German and the other an Austro-Swiss, tried their hand at the game recently and came to grief when they ran the Japanese-owned steamship, Sheng Am, aground. To take her they had murdered two Russians, the captain and the mate, the mate's Latvian wife and seven Chinese. The arch-plotters were Captain Huga Taudien, 55 years old, once a German soldier in China, and Heinrich Westermann, 45 years old, who survived the European war and then went to Shanghai as a sausage maker. These two, convicted of murder, are under sentence of death in Dairen, Manchukuo.

The three others are to serve from ten years to life imprisonment. As an account of their trial stated, one would have to go back to the deeds of Morgan and Bluebeard to find a counterpart for the fiendishness of the seizure of the Sheng Am. And the brain of a novelist would be required to conceive Taudin's scheme, which was to sail the ship to South America, there dispose of the rest of the Chinese crew and divide the spoils.

Joseph Mason Reeves earned the nicknames "Bull' back in 1893, when he was a ripsnorting tackle on the Navy football eleven. He certainly belies it today, for there is nothing of the physique or ferociousness of the bull in his tall slender figure or white-bearded face.

He looks like a professor and he has been that, too. He is also something of an orator, as well as being a "swell fellow" to the officers and "a great guy" to the ordinary gob.

He won his spurs on the old Oregon when she made that 14,500 miles dash around South America in 1898 to get in on the Battle of Santiago.

He rates in the highest bracket as a tactician and he has a warm spot in his heart for aviation because he, himself, is a flier who earned his wings at the age of 53.

And perhaps more than anything else, he is no subscriber to the opinion that the commander should stay away from the front line in battle. His theory in his own words is this:

Congress Blamed in Failure of Air Program

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Congress is chiefly to blame for the fact that our military air force, instead of being equal to the strongest, is today third in strength among the military air forces of the world.

Congress is to blame, primarily, because it is charged by the Constitution with the duty of providing for the national defense. When it fails to make this provision, it falls short of its constitutional obligations.

POLICY NOT CARRIED OUT

Congress is to blame, secondarily, because it has not even carried out its own established policy for the upbuilding of the army air corps. It has failed to make appropriations essential to the execution of its own program for this purpose.

In 1923, the Lassiter board—a board of army officers headed by Major General William L. Lassiter, U. S. A.—was appointed to find out and recommend what should constitute the proper strength and organization of an effective air service for the regular army, what it would require in material and personnel to perform its missions in peace and war. This board was also charged with the determination of the best means of developing this personnel and material to the maximum standard of military air force.

It was realized that to create such an air force would take time and that the cost of the creation of such a force would be prohibitive unless spread over a period of years. This board acknowledged the fact that the aircraft industry, which the wreckers of the Federal airmail last winter seemed bent upon destroying, needed a reasonable number of years in which to establish itself on a firm foundation.

For these and other reasons, this Lassiter board of 11 years ago recommended the adoption by Congress of a continuing program, extending over a period of 10 years for both material and personnel.

The report of the Lassiter board was promptly approved in principle. Its recommendations were the goal toward which the war department addressed its efforts toward the upbuilding of our military air force.

BOARD WON APPROVAL

The Morrow board of 1925, the establishment of which was one of the wisest acts of President Coolidge's administration, restudied the problem of aviation in its relation to national defense. It came to the conclusion that 10 years was too far to look ahead, so many and rapid were developments in the aeronautical world. It therefore recommended a five-year program for the upbuilding of our military air force, in the belief that at the end of five years a second five-year program should be inaugurated.

This sound reasoning of the Morrow board appealed to the federal government. Its recommendations were adopted at both ends of constitution avenue. They are the foundation of established policy for the upbuilding of the army air corps. And for the last eight years the army has been working toward the completion of this five-year program.

But Congress in recent years abandoned its own policy. Under both Republican and Democratic administration that have come to power since the Morrow board made its report, appropriations for the five-year program have fallen short of the schedule fixed by the Congress which adopted that program.

They began falling short while Mr. Hoover was President. Last year President Roosevelt, who began his administration by trying to balance the budget, impounded a large portion of even the small sum appropriated by the previous Congress for the army air corps.

PROGRAM FAR BEHIND

Thus each year the five-year program, which was formulated to give this country an effective military air force, has fallen further and further behind, because Congress refused to appropriate the comparatively small sums necessary to carry out this program and because last year part of the money appropriated was not spent for that purpose.

Meantime, millions of dollars are being spent for all sorts of public works. These expenditures are creating jobs but many of the projects for which the money is being expended could either be postponed or abandoned altogether without serious disadvantage to the country.

Work in the building of airplanes, engines, radios, instruments and accessories of all kinds, work in turning out ammunition supplies and equipment of all kinds for the army air corps will create jobs and provide employment just as quickly as will work on many projects now under construction that are either less urgently needed or not needed at all.
